of the worst disorders that afflict mankind arise from the corruption that accumulates in the blood. Of all the discoveries that have been made to purge it out, none can equal in effect HELMBOLD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF SARSAPARILLA. It cleanses and renovates the blood, instils the vigor of health into the system, and purges out the humors which make disease. It stimulates the healthy functions of the body, and expels the disorders that grow and rankle in the blood. Such a remedy, that could be relied on, has long been sought for, and now, for the first time, the public have one on which they can depend. Our space here does not admit of certificates to show its effects, but the trial of a single bottle will show to the sick that it has virtues surpassing anything they have ever taken.

Two tablespoonsful of the Extract of Sarsaparilla, added to a pint of water, is equal to the Lisbon Diet Drink, and one bottle is fully equal to a gallon of the Syrup of Sarsaparilla, or the decoction as usually made.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 24—11 P. M.

Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of the current week passed rather quietly with the army before Petersburgh. Along the whole line we were within easy musket range of the enemy, as we have been the three last days of the previous week, and there was an almost continual crackling of musketry kept up by the skirmish line, accompanied by occasional artillery shots and shelling, not unfrequently on portions of our front into a pretty heavy spasmodic fire. The system of general assaults along the whole line, which was frequently attempted in the closing days of last week, when our army had got up to the last line of rebel intrenchments, has in no instance been renewed thus far this week, as the gains were not at all commensurate with the losses. On Tuesday, the Second Corps, which occupied the right centre, moved to the left for several miles, its place being taken by portions of the Ninth and Eighteenth Corps, and crossed the Norfolk and Petersburgh Railroad, about half way between which and the line of the Weldon Railroad it halted. The presence of the enemy in force was developed some two miles this side of the Weldon Road and four miles from Petersburgh. A lively skirmish ensued, and the division was quickly formed in line of battle; but the enemy's position was found to be strong, and the force fell back and joined the main body, which was close by, for the night.

Our advance having thus been interrupted on Tuesday. The several corps of the army were on Wednesday formed in line of battle, ready for action, and a general engagement seemed imminent. Our latest advices are to the forenoon of Thursday, from City Point, some seven miles from the front. They report that heavy cannonading was heard all that morning, but whether this portends the opening of a general engagement, or only such work as was carried on upon the previous day is not yet positively known. It would surprise no one who is intimate with the situation there, to hear of a great battle at any hour, nor would it surprise them or cause them regret or be considered an adverse sign if the day of action was postponed by GRANT for some weeks. Our army is now excellently planted, and we press heavily and fatally upon the rebels every day that we remain where we now are.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CORPS, SOUTHWEST OF PETERSBURGH, NEAR WELDON RAILROAD, WEDNESDAY MORNING, June 22.

After leaving the trenches on the right and fronting DUNN'S house, which is located within the earthworks near the Prince George and Petersburgh Railroad, and near which the main body halted, detachments consisting of BARLOW'S First Division, with the Second United States Sharpshooters from the Third Division, were sent forward to reconnoitre on the Weldon Railroad southward, and Gen. GIBBON, with his Second Division, was sent in the direction of Petersburgh. Soon after noon BARLOW, having advanced to within less than two miles of the Weldon road, developed the presence of the enemy in force on the Jerusalem road, which was parallel with the railroad at a point within about four miles of the city. Here his skirmishers came suddenly upon some masked batteries of the enemy, while a deadly fire of musketry and artillery opened upon our advancing troops. The Second Sharpshooters, acting as skirmishers, were soon engaged in a lively exchange of shots with the enemy, and were supported by the division, now formed in line of battle. After a severe skirmish, in which the position of the enemy was ascertained to be strong, and in a measure intrenched, our troops retired, rejoining the main body, which by dark had advanced and taken up a position in line of battle on the Jerusalem road.

A cavalry force which had been sent out to reconnoitre on our left flank, met the enemy a few miles below near Jones' Swamp, where some skirmishing took place. At about 8 o'clock last evening the enemy's cavalry, under Gen. ROSSER, made a dash into our lines near Gen. BIRNEY'S headquarters, on the Jerusalem road, but immediately disappeared upon discovering our force. A few shots were exchanged, amounting to nothing.

While Col. MORGAN, of Gen. HANCOCK'S Staff, was reconnoitering, in company with Capt. MCMICHAELS, Maj. ANGELL and Capt. WILSON, of Gen. BIRNEY'S Staff, last evening, they surprised a party of five rebel soldiers, belonging to A. P. HILL'S corps, who were foraging, and took them prisoners, though none of the staff officers had any arms with them at the time. The rebels were much chagrined when they learned this fact.

By the capture of these men and other prisoners, last evening, it has been learned that A. P. HILL'S and LONGSTREET'S, with a part of EWELL'S corps, are in our front.

Col. BAKER, with his Adjutant of the Third North Carolina Cavalry, were taken prisoners during the skirmishing yesterday afternoon.

Col. ROMER R. STOUGHTON, of the Second Sharpshooters, who yesterday returned from home after a severe illness, was with his regiment in the skirmish line last evening during the brief encounter with the enemy, and his men say he was shot and probably taken prisoner, as he could not be reached when the line fell back.

We learn that Gen. SHERIDAN was attacked at White House, on Sunday, by a force embracing cavalry, infantry and artillery, under ARMSTRONG, and that after a sharp fight Gen. SHERIDAN drove the rebels back. The latter occupied a strongly intrenched position on the river, which enabled him to maintain himself without suffering material damage. Another veteran regiment will to-day leave the field, its time of service having expired—the First Excelsior. One hundred and eighty-six men, will go home, while the remainder, whose time has not yet expired, some three hundred in number, will be transferred to the Eighty-sixth New-York Regiment.

Fragments of News About an Important Movement—A Rear Attack from the Enemy—The Weldon Railroad in Our Possession.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, June 23—6 o'clock A. M.

WILSON'S division of cavalry moved off in the direction of the Weldon Railroad. When last heard from they had reached Rives Station, and were tearing up the track along the road.

The Second and Sixth Corps moved from their old positions on the right toward the Weldon Railroad.

Gen. LEE seems to have anticipated a movement by our left flank, or else he designed to turn our right, as when near the Jerusalem plank road the two corps were confronted by Gen. HILL'S corps, and a smart engagement ensued.

A battery of the Twelfth New-York Artillery was annoying the rebels who succeeded in getting round on the flank and charging it. The infantry supporting the battery were surprised, and after a faint show of resistance retired, leaving four guns in the hands of the rebels.

Our line was then re-formed. The men were becoming accustomed to Gen. LEE'S new practice of acting entirely on the defensive, and must have been confused by his bold and sudden onset.

Two divisions of the Fifth Corps were within easy supporting distance on the right, and the Sixth Corps were ready for any hostilities on the left.

Charges were made by the rebels, who suffered severely with each fresh assault.

There was heavy firing in front of the Ninth Corps about midnight. At times the musketry broke out into regular volleys, and all night our cannon kept firing at regular intervals.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF VIRGINIA AND NORTH CAROLINA, IN THE FIELD, Tuesday, June 21, 1864.

Has a newspaper correspondent a right to be sick? Such a question I have often put to myself on meeting some military friend whose features were twisted into a woeful shape, and whose voice was moderated to a minor key in a tone lugubrious and pitiful, as he replied, "I am a little under the weather to-day." My answer invariably has been that no such luxury is possible to those whom some have designated "the historians of the army," except in the rare instance of a prolonged lull in the battle-storm. Such an era has happened, and I avail myself of it to indulge in a stain of mingled illness and disgust. The usual camp-test of the reality of my symptoms has been repeatedly tried—i. e., the production of the inevitable spiritus frumenti—and my case is pronounced to be utterly devoid of sham, requiring strict quiet, some of the celebrated McCormick pills, and occasional doses of spiritus vini gallici. Under this treatment, scrupulously followed, I have survived the day, and find myself fully able to-night to write the news brought in voluntarily by sympathising friends, or else centering toward me through the efforts of "George," my faithful attendant of African descent, who has been vigilantly skirmishing in my behalf for information all the afternoon.

There was one period about midday when I was sorely tempted to start suddenly out of my sybaritish state, put on again the robes of health and energy, and order my hard-worked steed to be saddled, for the purpose of riding madly to the extreme right of our lines, whence the silence was broken by the sound of heavy and deliberate cannonading. "George," ever faithful, applied gentle restraint, and, reluctantly yielding to his power, I worried and wondered, and wondered and worried, until the explanation of the noise was brought in. After what seemed an uncommonly long delay, my anxiety was at last relieved by the army telegraph—a very excellent invention, which has superseded, in a great measure, the system of signaling by flags between the camps, although the flag system is still indispensable on the field of battle, where Generals must necessarily be shifting their positions. The wires of the army telegraph are insulated, and may be unrolled with great rapidity from a winch in a wagon, constructed for the purpose. As the wagon moves forward, the wire is left to trail on the ground, or is placed upon light, portable poles, with pointed ends for thrusting into the soil, or is simply rested upon branches of trees by the roadside, as it threads its way through all the corps' headquarters, and converges from every direction to the position of the General Commanding. When the army moves, the wire is taken up by the winch just as quickly as it was laid, and is ready for use at the next stopping-place.

But to return to the heavy cannonading, which was the actively belligerent event of the day. From Major LUDLOW, of Gen. BUTLER'S Staff, I was favored in getting the details, he having been an eye-witness. The firing was not on shore, but on the water, and the enemy was the aggressor. Two rebel iron-clads come down the James River to Dutch Gap, where the stream makes a sweeping curve, and began to deliver a deliberate fire across the Peninsula known as FARRAR'S Island, on the lower side of which Admiral LEE'S squadron was at anchor. The rebel vessels particularly aimed their guns upon the flag-ship Malvern, and another double-ender of the same class as the Malvern, being unable, by reason of the high banks of the river, to injure the three monitors which were at anchor still further up, or the half-dozen picket-boats which were stretched in a line below, two or three of which were scarcely more than half a mile from the enemy, being separated only by the narrow neck of the Peninsula. These picket boats, of course, were perfectly sheltered by the heights from the fire of the iron-clads, but experienced a little annoyance from sharpshooters, who had worked down through a march in the rear. It was difficult from the gunboats to suppress these nuisances effectively. The shots thrown by the rebels were in excellent line, the first striking on Farrar's Island in the mud, the second in the same line, plunging down much nearer the mark; the third closer still, the fourth and fifth still better, until at last one dropped into the water, within a few feet of the Admiral's ship. The distance at which these shots were thrown was not more than a mile and a quarter, and as the double-enders could make no proper resistance to this sort of treatment, they slowly moved behind the bluffs out of the way. Meanwhile a two-gun battery of heavy guns belonging to the rebels, posted on an eminence at least eighty feet above the river, at Hawlitt's farm, developed itself. Its fire commanded the reach where our fleet lay, and the three monitors were the recipients of its compliments. The monitors replied in kind, but the great elevation of the battery made their fire of little effect. It is thought that no great injury was done on either side. Late in the afternoon, two or more iron-clads of the enemy, accompanied by a tender, were observed steaming slowly down toward the point occupied by their colleagues, and it is likely that they will attempt to force their way further down in the morning. If they do, it will not be without overcoming a serious obstacle in the form of strong obstructions, which have been placed across the river by us at a short distance in advance of our monitors. The object of the rebels is, doubtless, to get down low enough to throw an enfilading fire upon our intrenchments across the Bermuda Hundred line. It devolves upon Admiral LEE to frustrate this purpose. The Richmond iron-clads are similar in shape to the Atlanta, captured in Warsaw Sound, Ga., by the Weehawken. Their sides and ends slope inboard, and their port-holes shut up at the recoil of the guns after firing. Not far from the anchorage of our gun-boats, a pontoon bridge has just been thrown across the James at Deep Bottom, and a strong force under command of Gen. FOSTER has crossed to the north bank.

I was moving listlessly by Gen. BUTLER'S tent this afternoon, when he called me, supposing I would be glad to listen to his examination of a large number of rebel prisoners, who had just been selected from recent captures. Of course, I was grateful, and for an hour or so forgot altogether that I was sick and under treatment, being rendered oblivious of personal ills by the interest of the proceedings. A large number of prisoners were "corralled" on the grass, conveniently near the General's tent, where they were marched up, one at a time, to be questioned. The line of interrogation was almost exclusively to get information respecting the strength and organization of the enemy in front of us, particularly on the 10th inst., when GILLMORE failed to carry out his orders to attack Petersburgh. As each man appeared, he was requested to sit down on a camp-stool, just inside the tent door, opposite the General, who reclined easily on a carpet-bottomed seat, with his feet and legs raised at right angles to his body. Lieut. DAVENPORT, Gen. BUTLER'S private secretary, sat at a side-table, and took in short-hand the replies, judiciously retaining the wheat and rejecting the chaff. Gen. BUTLER'S fame as a lawyer is too well known to need mention; but if I had never heard of it, I should, after yesterday, have classed him among those rare persons who cause the truth to flow freely from the most unwilling. Those peculiar glances of his, which appear to flash their fire into the concealed depths of the mind of the witness, assuring him that he is read through and through, compel the utterance of the facts, in spite of all determination to the contrary. There was no browbeating, no loud intonation, but questions were quietly put and forced home to the understanding of the dullest witness, by a penetrating look, establishing between them, as it seemed, a magnetic chain over which the truth has free passage. Since Gen. BUTLER'S camp has been fixed at this place, probably not less than three hundred prisoners have undergone a thorough examination by him, and in this way he has been able to obtain very full and correct information respecting the organization of the rebel army. He can tell now the troops composing every corps, the number and strength of the regiments, the names of the brigade and division, and even the regimental Commanders, and a vast quantity of details, which is very useful not only to himself but to Gen. GRANT in keeping informed of the enemy's movements.

A large number of the prisoners examined belonged to the Forty-sixth Virginia Regiment, an organization not more than 500 strong, which held the Petersburgh fortifications in conjunction with about 150 militiamen on the day when Gen. GILLMORE refused to fight. Gen. BUTLER knew before the expedition set out almost the precise strength of the force with which GILLMORE must contend, and these men were examined merely to verify what was already known. Scarcely one of them did not hesitate to say that if Gen. GILLMORE had pressed on with his four thousand men, he might have walked over all opposition, and taken possession of the town. He did not even feel the strength of the fortifications which SMITH so gallantly carried five days afterward. Under these circumstances, to whom should the odium attach for the fearful destruction of life which has already happened and for the streams of blood which must yet flow before Petersburgh can be taken!

Among the prisoners were men from Alabama, Tennessee, and Georgia, as well as the Virginians. I remarked that the Southwestern men carried themselves more boldly than the others. They did not seem at all perturbed at being in conversation with so high an officer as Gen. BUTLER, and kept their hats on during the interview. Occasionally, one of them who seemed more intelligent than the rest would be asked "Well, my man, can you tell me what you're fighting for?" The reply would be, as it is, I am told, in nineteen cases out of twenty; "I don't know; I wouldn't fight a minute if I wasn't obliged to. We were satisfied in the Union, but when the South went out we were forced to go too." One of those yesterday examined was a Georgian, evidently a good soldier and a frank-spoken man, said that he was fighting for his home and southern institutions. He had been satisfied to live in the Union, but when the leading men of the South decreed secession, he had elected to fight, and would fight now and forever. Evidently he was one of the "last ditch" fellows. Another was an old man from Albemarle, Virginia, a boat-builder, and a man above the ordinary intelligence. He said his time was out in a day or two, the three years for which he enlisted having expired. He did not expect, however, to be discharged. The Confederate Congress had passed a law keeping him and all others in the ranks. Gen. BUTLER animadverted upon such want of faith, but was silenced at the prisoner's remark that "a poor man, generally speaking, would steal rather than starve to death, and on that principle the Confederate Government had acted." Gen. BUTLER told this old man that he nor his comrades need not expect to be exchanged until Mr. DAVIS chose to reply favorably to the demand for the exchange of negro soldiers. "They refuse to exchange," said the General, "on the ground that it would be elevating a negro to the level of a white man. Singular reason! If the negro is inferior to the white man, and you get a white man for every negro, don't you gain and I lose by the exchange?" At this view the man opened his eyes. "Again," said the General, "your authorities refuse to exchange for negroes because negroes are property. Well, mules are property. Suppose I train a brigade of mules to charge upon your works at the sound of a trumpet, and they advance to the assault and kick out your brains. You capture some of them. Because they are property would you refuse to exchange them for men? Who would get the best of the bargain; you or I?" This was another "sockdologer," and the Virginian went off to unfold this novel view of exchanges to his comrades.

An incident occurred in connection with some of these prisoners the other day, which shows how Gen. BUTLER is regarded. He must be considered an ogre of the bloodthirstiest variety. Upon being captured, they were taken before Gen. TERRY, who said that he should send them to Gen. BUTLER. They ejaculated, evidently in great fear, "We appeal to you for protection, sir!"

I wrote the other day from the Army of the Potomac about the good physical condition of the prisoners. The appearance of their robust bodies and healthy faces is not improved by the clothing they wear. Without exception their uniform is the most unsightly thing I ever looked upon as a production of the sartorial art. Originally of a dingy gray, the weather has bleached and faded the material until it has the yellowish tinge of brick dust. A cotton shirt, at one time white, but long since blackened by long wearing; short jacket, and pantaloons generally torn, and the latter very narrow in the legs, as if the pattern was scant, and a soiled, greasy felt hat, crowning a tangled mass of long, lank hair, and the dress is complete. It is a hideous contrast to the neat blue uniform of our own troops.

The Eighteenth Corps crossed the Appomattox again to-day to fight with the Army of the Potomac. Personally, it cannot be agreeable to the officers and men to be tossed like a shuttlecock from one side of the river to the other; but they forget discomfort of this sort in the feeling that "the rebellion must be crushed."

President LINCOLN spent yesterday with Gen. GRANT. To-day, it is said, that he will call upon Gen. BUTLER.

PARIS, Friday, June 10, 1864.

The foreign secession papers cling to the idea that LEE and JOHNSTON are only "drawing" GRANT and SHERMAN into the interior, so as to demolish them at their ease. For all those who wish it thus, and those who look at things superficially, the telegrams sent to the European press by the secession agents at New-York certainly warrant such a belief; and the happy man among those agents who invented that idea of "drawing into the interior" may congratulate himself on the colossal success of the word. We hope, before this reaches you, that you will have sent us news that will dispel that illusion.

Nevertheless, the occasion is a good one for again raising the cry of mediation; for you must have observed that it is only when the Union army is at work that this cry is heard; there is no need of it so long as the rebellion is let alone. The cry was started here by that class of Government people who stand next below the heads of departments, and who are all against us; it was eagerly caught up by the Secessionists and their friends in the press, and carried over to London by Mr. MASON to operate with on the English Government. It was declared by the journals that the French Government was prepared to act, if seconded by the English Government, and the expectations of the friends of rebeldom were thereupon boisterous, if not sincere. But the great work, they all acknowledge, is to be done in England. France is ready, they say, whenever England is; they claim even that the English Cabinet is in their favor, but the Cabinet will not move till the country moves, and so the work of secession propagandism is to be resumed and carried on with more vigor than ever.

I should say, also, that the refusal of the American Government to allow the English Government to communicate with Richmond, is esteemed by our secession friends a great insult to the English Government, and an event of which good use can be made in the new campaign in favor of mediation. They draw great encouragement, also, from the sort of message of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, on the subject of Federal enrollments of British subjects. But it is not probable that the French Government again thinks of offering its mediation; and it is certain that, whatever may be the secret desires of the English Government, it will not engage in any measure in conjunction with France against the United States. At any rate, if Gen. GRANT'S campaign is successful, it will be too late for the kind of mediation which is contemplated, that is to say, for a hostile mediation, and if it is not successful, the let-alone policy will be considered sufficient by our enemies.

The French Government has received an assurance from the constructors of the Confederate ships in French ports, that the two rams, (which, however, could not be got ready for sea sooner than August,) have been sold to an European Government; but to what Government it was not stated, nor is it necessary to know. The three frigates are not yet sold, and as two of them are ready to go to sea, and have their armaments waiting for them on another vessel, employed for that purpose, there is an apprehension at Bordeaux and at Nantes that, somehow or other, they are going to pass into the hands of those for whom they were built. But the French Government is bound to see that they do not go into Confederate hands, and they will probably be treated like the Rappahannock—that is to say, guarded in their places by men-of-war.

The ministerial papers, which are all secession, affect not to understand the Irish exodus to the United States, and throw all sorts of "cold water" on the emigration idea. The Constitutionnel devotes a long article to the subject, and attributes the emigration to the poverty of the country, to starvation, and to the state of servitude in which England holds the Irish people. Beyond that the writer is not able to see. He cannot comprehend why the Irish go to seek a refuge in a country deluged in blood and in civil war, or why they should go to fight in a cause in which they have no interest, and cannot even understand. The writer even ventures to say that they flee from oppression, and then engage in a crusade to oppress a people who also are struggling to free themselves from bondage. But the cloven foot of secession sticks out of all this writer says, and the fact is, this immense European emigration to the United States is a standing enigma to Europeans, and a source of vexation to our enemies. It would not be surprising to see some arbitrary measure adopted to prevent it, as well from Great Britain as from this continent.

The Monitour has allowed itself to get into a scrape. It publishes a letter from its New-York correspondent which condemns as a gross infringement of the rights of the press the suppression for a day of the World and Journal of Commerce. And yet the Monitour is the organ by which the French Government frequently suppresses journals and from which there is no appeal of any kind. Moreover, these suppressions take place in a time of peace and in a country in which there is a standing army, in time of peace, of nearly half a million of men! The joke is a good one, and the liberal journals, anxious to make the most of it, can only say that they hope the article in question forebodes a speedy removal of the restrictions on the press.

The Monitour's New-York correspondent, in the article in question, while giving due credit to the valor of the Army of the Potomac, and to the great military qualities of Gen. GRANT, yet attempts to show that the chances of arriving at Richmond are against him, and prepares his readers for a great defeat of the Union army.

A young American, 23 years of age, was killed last week on the railway between Paris and Lyons, under circumstances which are not yet well established. He was was found dead on the track after the passage of the train, but whether he fell out, was thrown out, or threw himself out, does not yet appear. It is evident that he was traveling in a compartment of the car in which there were no other travelers, or not more than one. The truth will soon be known.

The execution of the homœopathic physician DR. COUTY DE LA POMMERAIS, yesterday morning, rather took the city by surprise, as it was supposed that the Emperor would certainly commute the penalty.

MALAKOFF.

Enlistments in Ireland for the United States Army.

The following is the text in full of Lord RUSSELL'S speech in the House of Lords, in the debate of the 9th inst. on Irish enlistments:

Earl RUSSELL, who was occasionally very indistinctly heard, said: My noble friend has moved for copies of dispatches and reports respecting the enlistment of Irishmen in the United States service at Boston and Portland, and, knowing perfectly well that these papers would be granted,—for their production has been promised—he has thought it right to raise his complaint that remonstrances have not been made at Washington against the proceedings adopted at those two places. Now, it is no doubt more convenient to complain of your Minister abroad and your Foreign Secretary at home before you have the papers, but it would, I think, be more candid to wait till you have the papers, and then to see whether Lord LYONS or I have so entirely neglected our duty as my noble friend presumes we have done. I can only say for Lord LYONS that he has continually remonstrated, not only by dispatches and notes, but more frequently in interviews with Mr. SEWARD; and since he has been at Washington, nothing has given him greater vexation and distress of mind than these proceedings at Boston. Of course, I say nothing about myself, except that I have seconded the efforts of Lord LYONS. Well, my noble friend, after many explanations on this subject, remains in the same confusion of mind with respect to the Foreign Enlistment Act that was so prevalent at the commencement of the war. He says: "You allow muskets and powder to be conveyed to the Federal States, while at the same time you prohibit ships from going to the Confederates." In the first place, it so happens that there is a distinction in the law. There is no law which prevents persons in this country from taking arms or powder either to the Federal States or to the Confederates. Such articles are liable to capture, and the vessels conveying munitions of war may also be condemned if found attempting to break the blockade. But those who carry such munitions are not liable to any punishment in this country for so carrying. There is likewise reason as well as law for this distinction. When you send muskets or cannon as articles of merchandise, they, as the American authorities have always declared, are among the productions of the industry of the country from which they come, and those who send them do not themselves perform any act of hostility. Such munitions may, indeed, after reaching a belligerent, be then applied for purposes of hostility; but it is a very different thing if you have men either enlisted or arrayed in this country for the purpose of hostilities against any Power with which Her Majesty is at peace, or, if you have a ship sent out from your shores for the purpose of hostilities against such a State. If the ship went, as some of the American judges have in certain cases found was the fact, merely with a crew sufficient to take the vessel into the port of a belligerent, that might be a case somewhat analogous to the carrying of cannon and muskets. But when the vessel and crew go forth already equipped from the coast of the neutral, and commit hostilities directly they get to sea against a State in amity with Her Majesty, it is evident that that is quite a different proceeding from carrying muskets over from your own coast to a belligerent's coast. Take the case which occurred two hundred years ago, when ten thousand men were sent to take part in the civil war in Portugal. If you have ten thousand men armed and sent from your shores to take part in a civil war, the Government are properly responsible for that. But the confusion of ideas on the part of my noble friend is hardly excusable.

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE explained that he had spoken of the distinction made by the Foreign Enlistment Act, and that he had objected to that Act. He had found fault, not with the Government, but with the Act.

Earl RUSSELL—I am aware of that, but my noble friend did not appear to see the reason of the act, and a very sound and sufficient reason it is—viz. that if you send cannon or muskets they are articles of merchandise, but if you send men armed with muskets and formed into regiments to be employed against a State in amity with Her Majesty, you are clearly taking part in the war. It is on that principle that we have not allowed ships to go from this country armed and ready to commence hostilities, if we could prevent it. We have so acted, believing not only that it is the law, but that the law is based on a sound principle. My noble friend went on to complain of what has been done in Ireland; and certainly I am ready to complain of that as much as he is. But, when we come to investigate the circumstances, the question is whether the Government or those who execute the law in Ireland, are to blame for anything which has occurred there. It appears that a person named FURRY, who had lived twelve or thirteen years in the United States, engaged in a speculation with another person named KIDDER, to induce men to go from Ireland to America, in order to obtain the $600 or $700 per head bounty money, on their entering the army there. These speculators put the greater part of that money in their own pocket, and defrauded the honest, but I must say credulous, countrymen of my noble friend. My noble friend says that when these advertisements appeared, holding out the hope of high wages to those poor people by working on railways and canals in America, he is at loss to conceive how any of them should have allowed themselves to be so duped. Well, if he be at a loss to conceive how that could be, certainly I must be much more so; but I am afraid that such credulity is somewhat characteristic of his countrymen. But if a man comes to this country, and says to laboring men already earning tolerable wages, "If you will go and work in Germany or in America, or wherever it may be, I will take care that you shall get very high wages," and if people are simple enough to yield to that temptation, how can the Government be blamed for their imprudence or folly? It must be a very singular Government indeed which should undertake that no man shall do anything imprudent or foolish. Well, about one hundred of these men went from Ireland to Boston and Portland. My noble friend has truly described the careless treatment they met with in those places. I cannot but think that the United States police acted a very unworthy part, as well as those who were immediately concerned in inveigling those persons. But the police and the recruiting officers declared before a committee of inquiry, which the American Government instituted, that when the men engaged to enlist they were perfectly sober, and that, however drunk they were the evening before, they were sober at the time they enlisted. Well, Lord LYONS said, and I think very justly, that the men themselves should have been examined as to the treatment they received and the State in which they were when they enlisted. Instead of that, several of them were carried off as recruits and immediately sent to join the United States army. One of them, named SULLIVAN, was afterward taken to hospital; and he subsequently told his story to Lord LYONS, explaining the way in which he had been coerced, and how he had escaped. I have said before that I think it highly discreditable to the United States Government that their civil as well as their military authorities did not immediately make an investigation into the facts stated to them by Lord LYONS; that they did not bring all these men to Washington, and, unless they were found to have enlisted in a perfectly voluntary manner, discharge them. Lord LYONS has remonstrated against the inaction of the United States Government, and their want of attention. But my noble friend requires more than this; he seems to think we should have intimated that if our remonstrances were neglected we would go to war. He says that if ever there was a case for war this is that case; and he asks, "If remonstrances of this kind are not attended to, when will you go to war?" Undoubtedly these acts of injustice are the sort of acts which are frequently calculated, unless they are redressed, to lead to war, and it is the bounden duty of the American Government to attend to remonstrances so well grounded as those which we have addressed to them. The conduct of the American Government in 1812 is held up by the noble Marquis as an example for imitation. It is to be recollected that the American Government at that time had to complain of what I think was a very great abuse, the arbitrary and lawless power exercised by our officers, who had seized men, and, without any proof of their being British subjects, pressed them into our navy. Americans have told me how strong was the feeling which that caused. I have been told that it frequently happened that the sons of farmers in the New-England States went on board merchant ships for a year or two, and were then seized as British subjects by our officers, from whom no redress could be obtained. Of course, that conduct rankled in the minds of the Americans, but still some years elapsed before they proceeded so far as to make war against this country. Your lordships must bear in mind, too, that if we were to resort to extremities we should have considerable difficulty in determining what course to pursue, for the Confederate States are in the constant habit of ordering conscriptions and forcing British subjects to serve under their standard. When our consuls have remonstrated, they have been told, in the first place, that the men might apply to the courts of justice, and then, when they have repeated their remonstrances, they have been sent away altogether. If, therefore, we have to complain of great injuries on the part of the Federal States, we have no less reason to complain of the conduct of the Confederate States, and if war is our only remedy, we must go to war with both belligerents. (A laugh.) The noble Marquis seems to have an appetite for war, and, perhaps, he would be better pleased to go to war with both parties than with one only. All, however, I can say at present is, that our remonstrances shall be continued, and that we shall continue, as heretofore, to warn the subjects of Her Majesty in Ireland against embarking in pretended plans for getting them labor and high wages in America, but really for entrapping them into serving as soldiers in the Federal armies. I agree with the noble and learned Lord who has just spoken, that this is a most horrible war. There appears to be such hatred and animosity between great hosts of men, who were lately united under one Government, that no consideration seems powerful enough to induce them to put an end to their fratricidal strife, and it is difficult to deal with them on those ordinary principles which have hitherto governed the conduct of civilized mankind. It is to be hoped that these hostilities may cease, but I am afraid it is not to be reckoned on that any intervence of ours would tend to produce peace, because in America there is a strong feeling against any of the nations of Europe, but especially any of the monarchical nations pretending to meddle with the civil war now raging in this country. Still it is dreadful to think that thousands of men are being slaughtered for the purpose of preventing the Southern States from acting on those very principles of independence, which, in 1776, were asserted by the whole of America against this country. Only a few years ago the Americans were in the habit, on the 4th of July, of celebrating the promulgation of the Declaration of Independence, and some eminent friends of mine never failed to make eloquent and stirring orations on those occasions. I wish, while they kept up so useless ceremony—for the present generation of Englishmen are not responsible for the War of Independence—that they had inculcated upon their own minds that they should not go to war with 5,000,000, 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 of their fellow countrymen who want to put the principles of 1776 into operation as regards themselves. [Hear, hear.] With respect to the motion of the noble marquis I shall produce whatever papers we have got. Those papers, I think, tell a story very discreditable to the American Republic; and all I can say is that we shall continue to remonstrate in the strongest terms, not to save the unfortunate men who have already enlisted, and many of whom have already fallen in the field, but with a view to prevent similar shocking cases in future. [Hear, hear.]

Important Extension of Our Lines on the Left—The Petersburgh and Weldon Railroad Seized.

Correspondence of the Philadelphia Inquirer.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,
Tuesday, June 21, 1864—9 P. M.

Another day has passed without any important new developments, but there are indications that events of considerable moment may shortly be looked for. I will only say now that our lines have been extended on the left a distance of from two to three miles; and, as an item of some importance, that it now cuts the Petersburgh and Weldon Railroad, thus effectually interrupting the direct line of communication between Richmond and the Gulf and seaboard States.

To-morrow we shall probably make another grand effort for the possession of Petersburgh, and the dispositions of troops I see going forward this evening, tend to inspire confidence that the result will be successful. What these dispositions are, had, perhaps, better not be told until the event is over.

The rebel batteries opposite our right have been unusually pacific in their demeanor to-day. Ambulances have been moved along the road in plain view of the position they occupied. Our batteries have opened upon them, but these provocations have been insufficient to stimulate them to active resentment.

Distant artillery firing was heard to the left to-day, and it was probably WILSON'S division of cavalry engaging some force of the enemy.

Our base at City Point is one of the best we have had during the entire campaign. It is within five or six miles of the front, and, the roads being good, the army need want for nothing that the resources of the nation can supply.

The wounded from the various hospitals have nearly all been sent to that point for shipment North, and will soon be placed in the well-regulated hospitals of our great cities, where private philanthropy, operating with the established agencies of the Medical Department, will procure them those alleviations of their sufferings to which they are so well entitled.

President LINCOLN was at the army headquarters for a short time this afternoon. He rode out along the heights occupied by the captured fortifications, from which he could enjoy as satisfactory a view of the position in front as is usually to be obtained. Wherever he went he was enthusiastically cheered by such troops as were in his way, the number of whom, however, was not large, as most of the army was uninvitingly near the front.

I presume the opponents of the Administration will seize upon this visit as a pretext for raising the usual cry about Washington intermeddling with military affairs. Let me assure them that they have no cause for alarm on this subject, as here in the army, where we are most deeply interested, the matter gives us no trouble whatever.

An Important Point Settled.

HOW AND WHERE VALLANDIGHAM CROSSED FROM CANADA.

From the Detroit Advertiser, June 17.

We have taken pains to ascertain the facts in the case, which are briefly as follows:

For some time past the "martyr" has been known to indulge in the pastime of fishing in the Detroit River, a few miles below Sandwich, at the old "Red Tavern." On Tuesday afternoon he left the Hirons House for the above locality, where he remained till about 9½ o'clock, at which time he was conveyed across the river at Wyandotte, where he took the Michigan Southern Road. A man residing in this city is known to have purchased a ticket over this road for Cincinnati on that day, and as he did not leave the city at all, it is fair to presume that it was obtained for VALLANDIGHAM. Be that as it may, "Val." crossed the river at Wyandotte, he previously having been disguised so as to avoid detection, and at about 10 o'clock he was on his way to Ohio in a sleeping-car.

Senator Richardson's Position.

A FRANK STATEMENT.

SENATE CHAMBER, June, 22, 1864.

Editor Constitutional Union:

In the Morning Chronicle of this date I find a telegraphic dispatch as follows:

WOOD PEACE MEETING IN NEW-YORK.

NEW-YORK, June 21.

The Wood, or Peace State Central Committee, met at the Astor House this afternoon. Sixty persons were present. Several letters were received; among others, one from Senator RICHARDSON, advocating peace.

I presume the same dispatch is in other papers.

I have written no letter of the kind to the "Peace State Central Committee" of New-York, or any other committee or individual.

I am anxious to defeat Mr. LINCOLN this Fall, and regarding this and all similar organizations as aiding his election, I am against them. I expect to vote for the nominee of the Chicago Convention, and shall give aid and comfort to no man or party who, by indirection, seeks to defeat that nomination.

I am, truly, W. A. RICHARDSON.

LAW REPORTS.

The Arguelles Case—Liability for Acts Done by Direction of the President—Jurisdiction of the State and National Courts.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hoffman and Judge Russell.

The People vs. Robert Murray et als.—On a motion to quash the indictments in these cases, the following points were argued in its support:

On the 19th of May, 1864, the grand jury of this county found an indictment against the defendants above named, substantially, if not exactly, in the form of an ordinary indictment for kidnapping. No complaint had been made against the defendants, or either of them, before a magistrate, and no arrest made; and the grand jury acted on their own motion exclusively, except so far as they may have been advised by the District Attorney, in regard to which we have no specific information. The person alleged to have been kidnapped is called Don José Augustin Arguelles. He was taken out of the United States to the Island of Cuba under a direct order and authority of the Federal Government, through the President and Secretary of State, on a request made by the Spanish Government, in which it is understood that the English Government united, with which request our own Government thought proper to comply. The charge against him, sustained by the proofs in our State Department, is that, having, as an officer in the service of the Spanish Government, captured certain slaves from a slave-trading vessel, and landed them in Cuba, where, by that act, they became emancipated, he subsequently sold them into Slavery, and with the proceeds fled from justice into the United States. Our Government decided that he was a fugitive from justice, charged with the crime, of which, upon the proof, he appeared to be guilty, and for that cause surrendered him to the Government whose laws he had violated, and from whose jurisdiction he had fled. It is understood that since the return of Arguelles to Cuba, and in consequence thereof, eighty-six of those slaves have been set free.

POINT I.

We understand the rule to have been established in this court, with the express approbation of the District Attorney, that the Grand Jury are to entertain no complaint without a previous examination before a magistrate, unless the defendant resides out of the State, or when to prevent the Statute of Limitations attaching, it becomes necessary to find an indictment on a given day. This rule was stated by His Honor Judge RUSSELL, during his first term of office, in a charge to the Grand Jury. After stating the exception just mentioned, he remarked: "Beyond the two instances named, unless in cases of great public emergency, involving the public health, happiness, comfort, peace, welfare—implicating in their consequences, as it were, the whole community—not by fiction, as all crimes are said to affect the public, but in reality, it would be well for the Grand Jury, unless the circumstances are very peculiar, to receive no accusation not sent to them by a magistrate." He has repeated this instruction substantially in many subsequent charges. The same rule was laid down by his Honor Judge Edmonds, in the famous Drury cases. In the case of The People vs. Devlin, decided in November, 1858, his Honor Judge Russell declared that the Court of Sessions had perfect control over an indictment as a record filed in the court, and could set it aside for fraud, oppression, &c., and intimated that he would always exercise such a power on a motion to quash, in a proper case. (See points of John Graham, Esq., in The People vs. Deaderick and others.) His Honor Recorder Barnard recognized this rule as one reason for quashing indictments in the following cases: The People vs. Houseright and Hackett, 10th December, 1858; The People vs. Farley and others; The People vs. Turner and others, 10th February, 1859; The People vs. Devlin and others, 7th March, 1859; The People vs. Fitzpatrick and others, 4th October, 1859.

His Honor Judge RUSSELL, in one of his charges, said: "Although the court may not have the power to prevent the Grand Jury finding an indictment, yet where it is found oppressively or in violation of the rights of individuals, the court has the power to vacate or quash it. * * * * * If the Grand Jury cannot be restrained by injunction, their action can be set aside when it disregards the demands of humanity or the law, or tends not to promote the ends of justice."

POINT II.

The charge against Mr. Murray and the other defendants is in reference to what we well know to have been an official act by him, as Marshal of the United States, under the orders of the Federal Government, and not only justice, but courtesy required that that Government should be afforded an opportunity before a magistrate to vindicate its action.

As to the evidence before the Grand Jury—

First—It disclosed that the acts constituting the supposed kidnapping were done by Murray and his aids under National authority.

Second—The Executive of the Federal Government had power to surrender Arguelles. There is a very clear distinction between what a nation may do in the voluntary exercise of its own functions, and what it may be required to do in its relations to a foreign Power. There is no duty to surrender a fugitive, unless it arises from a treaty; but the right to expel a fugitive criminal is well settled. Chancellor Kent says, (1 Kent's Commentaries, 37:) "It is declared by some of the most distinguished public jurists, that every State is bound to deny an asylum to criminals, and upon application and due examination of the case, to surrender the fugitive to a foreign State where the crime is committed." He cites most eminent authorities. To these we add 1 Blackstone's Commentaries, 259, where the author admits "that it is left in the power of all States to take such measures in relation to the admission of strangers, as they may think convenient, and to send them home if necessary." Chitty's Criminal Practice, Vol. I, p. 16, says: "If a person having committed a felony in a foreign country, comes into England, he may be arrested here, and conveyed and given up to a magistrate of the country against the laws of which the offence was committed." Vattel says: "Assassins, incendiaries, and robbers, are seized everywhere at the desire of the sovereign of the place where the crime is committed, and delivered up to his justice."

The cases in this State are carefully collected in the Matter of Washburn, (4 Johnson's Ch. R., 106.) Washburn had committed a theft in Upper Canada, and fled to the United States. The money stolen by him consisted of Montreal bills. He was taken before the Recorder of Troy, in this State, and detained in custody under a mittimus from the latter, on a charge of having 170 of the bills in his possession. On habeas corpus, Chancellor Kent discharged him on the ground that there was a want of proof as to the identity of the bills, but distinctly affirmed the right to surrender him. He says: "It is the law and usage of nations, resting upon the plainest principles of justice and public utility, to deliver up offenders charged with felony and other high crimes, and flying from the country in which the crime was committed into a foreign and friendly jurisdiction."

In the case of the British prisoners, (1 Woodbury and Minot, 67,) the defendants are charged with piracy, and committed to jail in Maine under a warrant from James Buchanan, Secretary of State of the United States, executed by the Marshal of the district. The prisoners were remanded. The offence was enumerated in the Treaty of 1842. Judge Woodbury says, that without the stipulation in the treaty, "however it it might seem in point of comity or morals, to surrender citizens of other countries to answer for offences committed at home against their own laws is usually considered that there is no political obligation under the laws of nations to do it." "It is optional to do it or not, though in case of mere political offences, it is seldom done." For these propositions he cites many American cases decided by the Federal and State judiciary. He holds that the extradition in such cases, where the subject is connected with our foreign relations, properly belongs to the Executive of the General Government.

The Hon. Caleb Cushing, (Opinions of Attorneys General, vol. 6, p. 88.) while he advised against a certain surrender, distinctly recognizes the power to deliver up fugitives, saying: "It is true any State may, in its discretion, do this as a matter of comity toward the foreign State, but all such discretion is of inconvenient exercise in a constitutional Republic organized as the United States."

In Short's case, (10 Sargent & Rawle, 131,) Chief Justice Tilghman asserts "the undoubted right of every nation to surrender fugitives from other States," and remarks, "a man has a right to say, 'I will force myself upon your protection, and you shall protect me.'"

POINT III.

The principle thus stated is absolutely necessary to domestic security and welfare. It would be monstrous it all foreign Governments could banish their criminal subjects and send them into our territory, obliging us not only to protect, but perhaps maintain them, without power on our part to expel or remove them; and it would be very unjust if every man committing a crime against the law of nations, or the laws of a foreign Power, should be certain of immunity from punishment if he could place himself within our borders. In this State, from an early period, we have taken great pains to provide against any such consequences in the administration of our local Government.

The act of April 5, 1822, chap. 148, authorizes our Governor, in his discretion, on requisition from a foreign Government, to surrender up fugitives charged with crimes punishable by our laws with death or imprisonment in the State prison, if the evidence of criminality be such as, by our laws, to warrant detaining the party for trial on a like charge.

The New-York Revised Statutes, vol. 1, 164, §§ 8, 9, 10 and 11, have made much larger provisions for such cases, providing that the Governor may, "in his discretion, deliver over to justice" any person found within this State charged with having committed in a foreign State any crime except treason, which, by the laws of this State, if committed herein, would be punishable by death or imprisonment in the State Prison. The delivery is to be made on the requisition of the duly authorized ministers or officers of the Government within whose jurisdiction the crime is charged to have been committed. The Governor is only to require such evidence of guilt for the purpose of extradition as would be necessary to justify "apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime had been committed in this State."

About the year 1833, it became so evident to our people that foreign Governments were sending their convicts to the port of New-York, that, on the 25th of April in that year, the Legislature of this State passed an act providing that the master of any vessel of a foreign country bringing any person as a passenger or hand, within this State, with intent to land him, such person having been convicted in a foreign country of felony, which, if perpetrated here, would be punishable, should be considered guilty of misdemeanor, and be punished by fine or imprisonment. It also provides that the court, before whom a party is convicted under this act, may remit the punishment, if satisfied that the accused has reconveyed the convict to the place whence he took him—thus investing a master of a vessel, in such a case, merely of his own motion, with power to perform what is equivalent to an act of extradition.

In the matter of Clark, 9 Wend., 21, Savage, Chief Justice, says: "Civilized nations see the necessity and propriety of surrendering fugitives from justice that they may be tried by the laws of the country in which the offence was committed. This matter has usually been arranged by treaty; but where no treaty exists, the comity of nations requires that offenders against the laws of one nation shall not find a sanctuary in another."

POINT IV.

The surrender in this case was properly made by the National Executive, the offence being one against the laws of nations, as well as the laws of the United States. (Acts of April 20, 1818, sec. 16.)

We are considering merely the question of power, the exercise of which, in any case, is shown to depend upon the discretion of the Executive. It is so both as to the nation and the State. No argument is admissible against the power because of its possible abuse.

In this connection, we cite the remarks of Chief Justice Taney, in Luther vs. Borden, (7 Howard, 44.) There the President had called out the militia of Rhode Island to put down the Dorr revolution in that State. The Chief Justice remarks: "It is said that this power in the President is dangerous to liberty, and may be abused if placed in unworthy hands. It would be difficult, we think, to point out any other hands in which this power would be more safe, and, at the same time, equally effectual. * * * * * and the elevated office of the President, chosen as he is by the people of the United States, and the high responsibility he could not fail to feel when acting in a case of so much moment, appear to furnish as strong safeguards against the willful abuse of power as human prudence and foresight could well provide."

In Martin vs. Mott (12 Wheaton, 19) the court says: "Whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statutes constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts. * * * * * It is no answer that such a power may be abused, for there is no power which is not susceptible of abuse. * * * * * When the President exercises the authority confided to him by law, the presumption is, that it is exercised in pursuance of law. Every public officer is presumed to act in obedience to his duty until the contrary is shown, and, à fortiori, this presumption ought to be favorably applied to the Chief Magistrate of the Union."

POINT V.

The defendants having acted under the direction of the Executive, should not be held amenable to criminal punishment.

In Vanderheyden v. Young, (11, 150 Johnson,) militia man of this State, employed as a soldier in the service of the United States, brought an action against the President of a Court-martial for false imprisonment. He had been accused and punished as a deserter, and this fact was specially pleaded. It was held not necessary to allege for the defence, that a case had occurred which authorized the President to call out the militia, the President alone being made, by the Act of 28th February, 1795, the judge of the happening of an event which made the call necessary. The court say, "It is a general and sound principle, that whenever the law vests any person with the power to do an act, and it constitutes him a judge of the evidence upon which the act may be done, and at the same time contemplates that the act is to be carried into effect through the instrumentality of agents, the person thus clothed with power is invested with discretion, and is quoad hoc a judge. His mandates to his legal agents, on his declaring the event to have happened, will be a protection to those agents, and it is not their duty or business to investigate the facts thus referred to their superior, and to rejudge his determination. In a military point of view, the contrary doctrine would be subversive of all discipline; and as it regards the safety and security of the United States and its citizens, the consequences would be deplorable and fatal."

The same rule is of large application in civil cases, as, for example, where a deputy sheriff has been held not liable, because of his official act, as such, the act being directed by the sheriff, who, in such cases, is alone liable. (Calvin vs. Holbrook, 2 Comstock, 126.)

The following cases relate to this whole subject: Kendall vs. Stokes, 3 Howard, 97; Mitchell vs. Harmony, 13 Ib., 115; Seaman vs. Patten, 2 Caines R., 312; Yakes vs. Lansing, 5 J. R., 282; 9 J. R., 395; Barbour's Cr. Treatise, 35, 91.

POINT VI.

The kidnapping statute has no application to the facts of this case. It is aimed exclusively at a forcible and wholly unlawful seizure of a person in this State with certain intents, one of which is to cause him to be sent out of this State against his will (2 R. S., 664, § 28.) The act must be "without lawful authority." The word "kidnapping" necessarily and plainly involves the idea of seizures, imprisonments, or transportations, intended to be concealed and illegal. It does not at all relate to cases where the actor proceeds in the discharge of official duty, or under authority from a superior. Otherwise, it might extend to a police officer carrying to the State Prison a person convicted in a court which should be subsequently adjudged to have been without jurisdiction, or who carried into New-Jersey a person named in a requisition from the Executive of that State, which requisition should be judicially declared void.

It is settled, that an officer having a warrant not strictly legal, issued by a magistrate having jurisdiction, may kill those who oppose him in executing it, though the warrant were obtained by falsehood and imposition. (See Barbour as above cited.)

PART VII.

For these reasons, the indictment should be quashed. Clarence A. Seward, Samuel Blatchford, William M. Evarts, James T. Brady, of counsel for defendants.

To these points the District Attorney replied that a motion to quash an indictment is addressed to the discretion of the court; and that this discretion is never exercised in limine upon indictments for enormous crimes, but all matters of defence upon them are left for the trial.

The crime charged is, in its statutory feature, enormous. (This is the word used in the books.) In its nature it is enormous. And, although Murray was but an instructed agent of President Lincoln, the enormity of that nature must affect him according to the facts shown. It was thus enormous, because a man who was a representative of American freedom of asylum is without any examination in which he was permitted a hearing, and, without written warrant, seized by executive parol direction, and placed on board of an outward-bound ship.

These facts are prima facie and ex parte, it is true; but they appear for the purposes of this argument. The motion should be denied, in the discretion of the court, not only for the reasons aforesaid, but because an indictment cannot be quashed for matters extrinsic to it.

The indictment is a record, importing verity on its face, and the presumptions of its integrity should prevail at this time.

The point was also taken that the City Judge, having disposed of the question in his charge to the Grand Jury, it was now jet adjudicate in this Court.

After reciting portions of the evidence, it was further argued.

This abstract of testimony shows that prima facie proof was given to authorize the indictment. This waives arguments gratia, but only so; the right of this court on a motion to quash to examine into and pronounce upon the sufficiency of evidence before a Grand Jury.

The indictment, therefore, being sufficient on its face; and the matter alleged as the grounds for quashing being extrinsic and dehors the record; and the grounds, if pertinent, being untenable in fact and in law, the defendant should be compelled to take issue upon the indictment.

A. OAKEY HALL,
District Attorney for the People.

On the motion to remove to the United States Circuit for trial, the following points were argued in its support by same counsel:

I. The application is made under the provisions of the 5th section of the Act of Congress passed March 3, 1863, entitled "An Act relating to Habeas Corpus, and regulating Judicial Proceedings in certain cases." The papers upon which the motion is made show the case to be within the purview of that section. (12 St. U. S., 755.)

II.—As it is conceded that the laws of the United States within and conformed to, the authority of the Constitution of the United States, are paramount in all courts and jurisdictions, the motion must be granted, unless the section of the act in question is void for repugnance to the Constitution.

III.—That no such repugnance exists, and that the Act of Congress is valid, so far as it relates to the removal of a civil suit from the State court to the United States Circuit Court, has been adjudged, upon great consideration, by the General Term of the Supreme Court of this District.

It is respectfully submitted that the question within the premises of that decision should not be deemed an open one in this court. (Jones vs. Seward, General Term, March 14, 1864. Leonard P. J.; Sutherland, and Clerke, J. J.

IV. The proposition, upon which the act, in its application to civil suits was upheld as constitutional, by the Supreme Court of this State, was that laid down and always adhered to, by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Osborn vs. The Bank of the United States, 9 Wheat., 821.

Chief Justice MARSHALL, in delivering the opinion of the court, says: "We perceive no ground upon which the proposition can be maintained, that Congress is incapable of giving the Circuit Courts original jurisdiction in any case to which the appellate jurisdiction extends." (Ut supra, p. 821.)

V.—As the section of the act in question, in terms, provides for the removal of criminal prosecutions from the State to the United States Courts, the only question is, whether such provision is within the authority of the Constitution of the United States.

First, upon the adjudication of the Supreme Court of the United States, the answer to that question is to be sought in the answer to the question whether criminal prosecutions in the State Courts, within the purview of this section of the act of 1863, are subject to the appelate jurisdiction of the Federal Judiciary.

VI.—That criminal prosecutions, wherein the question of guilty or not guilty turns upon an authority, right in justification, under a law in the Constitution of the United States, are within the appellate jurisdiction, cannot be doubted, either upon reason or authority.

1. Nothing can be more at variance with the paramount authority of the Federal Government, than that it should be possible that a man should be punished by a State Court as a criminal, for an act enjoined, permitted or justified as a duty, or a right under the laws or Constitution of the United States.

To guard against this possibility, the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Judiciary is requisite, and has been established.

2. The exercise of this appellate jurisdiction is familiar, and its constitutionality has never been, judicially, doubted or discredited. (Cohen vs. State of Virginia, 6 Wheat., 264; Worcester vs. State of Georgia, 6 Pet., 567; Prigg vs. Comm. Penn., 16 Pet., 539; United States vs. Booth, 21 How., 506.)

VII.—As, then, it cannot be doubted that a writ of error will lie to review before the Supreme Court of the United States, the final judgment of the highest court in this State, in the case in which the present application is made; so, it is established by the decision of the paramount tribunal, that original jurisdiction may be conferred by Congress in the Circuit Court in such case.

By the act of Congress of March 3, 1863, such jurisdiction has been conferred on the United States Circuit Courts, and the manner and effect of a transfer to their jurisdiction provided.

VIII. The motion should be granted, and the removal of the case ordered.

To which Mr. Hall replied as follows:

The defendant, who is United States Marshal, has been indicted for the forcible seizure and confinement of one Arguelles, &c.

The alleged offence is one against the statutes of the State of New-York, and is not against any Federal statute.

A motion is made to remove the indictment from the State Court into the United States Circuit Court for trial; and the application is based upon section 5 of chapter 81 of the Laws of 37th Congress, (March, 1863.) The supposed applicable provisions are as follows:

"SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That if any suit or 'prosecution,' civil or 'criminal,' has been or shall be commenced in any State court against any officer, civil or military, or against any other person, for any arrest or imprisonment made, or other trespasses or 'wrongs' done or committed, or any act omitted to be done, at any time during the present rebellion, by virtue or under color of any authority derived from or exercised by or under the President of the United States, or any act of Congress, and the defendant shall, at the time of entering his appearance in such court, or if such appearance shall have been entered before the passage of this act, then, at the next session of the court in which such suit or 'prosecution' is pending, file a petition, stating the facts, and verified by affidavits, for the removal of the cause for trial at the next Circuit Court of the United States, to be holden in the district where the suit is pending, and offer good and sufficient surety for his filing in such court, on the first day of its session, copies of such process and other proceedings against him, and also for his appearing in such court and entering special bail in the cause, if special bail was originally required therein. It shall then be the duty of the State court to accept the surety, and proceed no further in the cause or 'prosecution,' and the bail that shall have been originally taken shall be discharged. And such copies being filed, as aforesaid, in such court of the United States, the cause shall proceed therein in the same manner as if it had been brought in said court by original process, whatever may be the amount in dispute or the damages claimed, or whatever the citizenship of the parties, any former law to the contrary notwithstanding." * * *

POINTS.

First.—This motion can be granted only through an unconstitutional application of the foregoing provisions.

1. If the prayer of the petitioner should be granted, a State will originally stand in the United States Circuit Court as plaintiff, with one of her own citizens as defendant.

2. Such a primary status of parties, either in civil or criminal controversy, is beyond the judicial jurisdiction granted by the Federal Constitution.

3. The constitutional test in an application to remove a controversy from a State to a Federal Court, and confer upon the latter original jurisdiction is, could the controversy so removed have been originally commenced in the latter tribunal? (1 Curtis' Commentaries on Jurisdiction, 6148; Conkling's Treatise on Organization, Jurisdiction and Practice of the United States Courts, 3 ed., p. 177.)

4. Let us refer to the constitutional provisions. Art. 3, sec. 2, is as follows:

"The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers, and Consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maratime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States, between a State and citizens of another State, between citizens of different States, between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens, or subjects."

5. Here let it be conceded by us that whenever this controversy between the State and Murray involves a determination of constitutional questions adverse to Murray in the State tribunal of last resort, then the appellate jurisdiction of the national Supreme Court may be invoked by writ of error. But this decision simply relates to a claim of original jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Court.

6. Under which of the foregoing provisions of the Constitution could the State of New-York have entered this latter court, and have indicted Murray, her own citizen, for a State offence?

7. What judicial jurisdiction is not granted by the Federal Constitution expressly, or by necessary implication to the Federal courts, exclusively belongs to the State courts. (1 Kent, 324.)

8. The relation of the States and the Federal Government on this subject of judicial jurisdiction is, under the theory of our institutions, necessarily reciprocal. The former cannot prosecute for offences against Federal statutes, and the latter cannot prosecute for offence against State statutes. As cases "arising under the laws of the United States" must be originally litigated in national tribunals, so those arising under State law must be originally controverted in State tribunals. The national Government is protected from State usurpation, and the States are made secure against Federal domination. The Supreme Court of the United States may be appealed to by the National or the State Governments whenever either infringe upon the constitutional and appropriate functions of the other.

9. It is evident, from considering the theory of this relation, that, even when a constitutional status of parties exist, there may be no standing for them in the Federal courts for want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter.

10. Hence, although a State sue an alien, the latter cannot always transfer the subject-matter from the State to the Federal tribunal. Yet, in that case, there would be an apparent right of removal under the Constitution, because of a propper conjunction of parties.

11. The latter proposition was established in Respublica vs. Cobbett, 3 Dallas, 476, and the subject matter of the suit merely severed of criminality.

William Cobbett had been sued in an action of debt by the State of Pennsylvania, upon a broken recognizance for good behavior. He petitioned to have it removed for trial into the United States Circuit Court, on the ground that he was an alien, and, under the concluding sentence of sec. 2, art. 3, supra. The removal was objected to. Messrs. Tilghman, Lewis & Rawle, of Pennsylvania, and Harper, of South Carolina, argued in favor of the removal. Messrs. Ingersoll and Dallas argued against it. There was color for the application, because Cobbett was a "foreign subject," and because he was defendant in action of debt. The court, per McKean, Ch. J., concludes its opinion as follows: "But that neither the Constitution nor Congress ever contemplated that any court under the United States should take cognizance of anything savoring of criminality against a State; That the action before the court is of a criminal nature, and for the punishment of a crime against the State. That yielding to the prayer of a petitioner would be highly inconvenient in itself, and injurious in the precedent; and the cognizance of it would not be accepted by the Circuit Court, if sent to them, for even consent cannot confer jurisdiction. For these reasons, and others, omitted for the sake of brevity, I conclude the prayer of William Cobbett cannot be granted."

12. Thus, an examination of the case of Cobbett shows that the court, although satisfied of the general rights of an alien to force his State antagonists into the Federal court, doubted his constitutional right so to do when the subject-matter of the suit was an offence against State law. How much more should this court doubt the constitutionality of now removing a controversy wherein there is a defect of parties, with also a defect of subject-matter?

Second—So far as this State is concerned, the question is an original one, and a recent decision of the Supreme Court in this District, approving a removal of an action from the State Court into the United States Circuit Court, under the cited law of 1863, does not bind this court against entertaining the question.

1. The case of Jones agt. Seward, wherein that decision was rendered (26 How. Pr. Rep. 433), was one which could have been originally brought in the court to which it was removed, because there an individual plaintiff and an individual defendant came, and each were citizens of different States; hence, it fell within the provision of the Constitution allowing a citizen of one State to sue a citizen of another State in the United States Court.

2. And cases from other States, which may be cited as arising between individuals, fall within the same distinction.

3. Omitting the momentous and interesting considerations which arise from this attempt of the General Government to control, if not to subvert, State sovereignty, there was a bare legal apology for asking that Jones v. Seward should be removed because Federal legislation amply secured to the plaintiff his rights of procedure against the defendant, and there was in court no defect of power to determine the controversy. But the act of 1863, under which this claim of removal is made, does hold—to bridge a long chasm of intermediate difficulties—provide how the offender against a State statute shall be sentenced if convicted. In short, whilst the analogies of a State procedure have been legislatively applied to civil suits when removed from State to Federal tribunals, none such have been applied to criminal prosecutions. And who could pardon?

Third—But, if there was not a failure of constitutional power respecting this motion, it should be denied for want of the necessary enabling legislation by Congress.

1. Because, even if a State may constitutionally be allowed to sue its own citizen civilly or criminally in a Federal court, as a matter of original jurisdiction, the State must, nevertheless, be expressly authorized and enabled, by an act of Congress, to commence such suit. GENERAL MARKETS.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 24—6 P. M.

The receipts of the principal kinds of produce since our last, have been 17 bbls. Ashes, 16,937 bbls. Flour, 421 bags Corn Meal, 138,748 bushels Wheat, 32,699 bushels Corn, 58 bushels Rye, 13,522 bushels Oats, 2,205 pkgs. Provisions, and 2,102 bbls. Whisky.

ASHES—Continue inactive at $11 62½ for Pots, and $13 50 for Pearls, ℔ 100 lbs.

COAL—Dealers are advancing prices on domestic from the local yards, though the supply is fair and the demand from consumers is moderate. The wholesale prices of Anthracite, from the boats, for house sizes, are now from $9 75@$10 25 ℔ long ton of 2,240 lbs., and the retail prices from the yard, $10 50@$11, generally $11, ℔ short ton of 2,000 lbs. At an average of $10 ℔ long ton at the boats, the average cost of the short ton to the dealers would seem to be a fraction less than $8 93, or fully $2 07 ℔ ton less than the prevalent retail price from the yards, which, in our judgement, leaves a very handsome margin for profit, in a branch of business, attended with a maximum of risk and expense in its successful management. Yet some of the dealers in coal coolly assert that they now lose money in filling the orders of their regular customers at current rates! The next monthly auction sale of Scranton Coal (25,000 tons) is announced in our advertising columns for Wednesday next, June 29. The sale will take place at noon, on that day, at the office of the Company, No. 35 William-street.

COFFEE—Is in more demand at uniform prices. Java at 49c.@50c.; Laguayra and Maracaibo at 41c.@43c.; Rio at 41c.@43½c.; St. Domingo at 36c.@37c. ℔ lb. Sales since our last, 4,100 bags.

COTTON—Continues in very moderate demand at drooping prices. Middlings at $1 42@$1 45 ℔ lb.; sales and resales since our last 500 bales. The following is the latest report of the New-Orleans market, (June 16,) received by mail: "The few lots placed in the market this morning were held at such extreme rates as to prevent their being taken, although buyers were willing to pay very full prices, and the only transactions reported were 12 bales mixed, &c., at — ; 7 pickings at 55c.; 14 good ordinary at $1 00½; and 16 bales, embracing 1 bale pickings, at 50c., 5 bales repacked at 65c., and 11 strict ordinary at 98c. The quotations of the New-York market on the 10th were not generally known until toward the close. The following is the New-Orleans cotton statement for the week ending June 16:

Railroad, 21,783 bbls.; other ports, 2,637 bbls. Receipts for week 7,121 bbls., against 7,502 bbls. same time last year. Freights to New-York, all rail, $1 25 ℔ bbl. Wheat—The past week has been marked by unusual excitement, and under the influence of a strong local demand to fill contracts, prices show the extraordinary advance of 30c. ℔ bushel. There is a fair demand on Eastern account, but the orders are mostly at prices much below those now current. The question of the weather has become a very serious one during the week, the continued dry weather having caused much alarm in regard to crop prospects. We hear to-day, however, of refreshing showers in many sections. Many parties state that so much damage has already been done, that under the most favorable circumstances the crop in this State and Minnesota will be largely under an average. Receipts for week 378,928 bushels against 279,120 bushels same time last year. The receipts since 1st January aggregate 5,371,923 bushels. The shipments for the week sum up 424,239 bushels, and since the opening of navigation 5,480,160 bushels, as follows:

CLINTON HALL, ASTOR-PLACE,
NEW-YORK, June 15, 1864.

THE UNDERSIGNED, TRUSTEES OF the "Clinton Hall Association," take pleasure in bringing to the notice of the public the proposition now on foot by the MERCANTILE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, to liquidate the debt upon the Clinton Hall, and to establish the Library upon a firm and permanent pecuniary basis. The plan is to solicit subscriptions for stock in the "Clinton Hall Association," every stockholder of which (the shares being One Hundred Dollars each) has access to the Mercantile Library free of any future charge. By its constitution, the whole income of the "Clinton Hall Association," after defraying the necessary charges of the establishment, is to be appropriated annually to the increase of the library.

The object of the present movement is to pay off this building debt, and thus have the income to be laid out as above provided.

The undersigned are sure that the two Associations have earned their positions before the community sufficiently to make this brief notice and recommendation all that will be necessary to inspire confidence in the undertaking.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The latest intelligence from Gen. GRANT'S army is an unofficial dispatch under date of June 23, at 6 A. M., which gives very meagre and indefinite details of Gen. GRANT'S latest movements. Our own dispatches, under date of 23d, give particulars of that affair, from which it appears that two corps, under HANCOCK and WRIGHT, marched from the right to the left on the night of the 21st for the purpose of extending the left, and more closely investing the City by covering the Weldon Railroad. WILSON'S cavalry division moved off on a raid by a circuitous route, and when last heard from had struck the railroad, and were busily engaged in tearing up the track. Our infantry, after marching several miles, were suddenly confronted by A. P. HILL'S corps, and a skirmish ensued, in which we lost four guns by a blunder in the disposition of our supporting force. Our columns soon rallied, however, and drove the enemy back to their original position. A reconnoissance was then made, which developed the enemy in strong force on a strong line, partly intrenched. Orders were then given for the advance of the whole army to that point, and a line of battle was formed. A general engagement on Thursday seemed imminent, and parties who left City Point that day say that very heavy cannonading was heard throughout the day, but no results were learned.

There is nothing later from Gen. SHERMAN.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill to amend the act to establish and equalize the grade of line officers in the navy was referred to the Naval Committee. A report was agreed to, recommending that the Senate recede from its amendments to the bill for the repair and preservation of certain public works of the United States. The bill for the promotion of commerce and the improvement of navigation was passed. The Pacific Telegraph bill was amended and passed. A bill was reported to provide salaries in lieu of commissions for Postmasters. The Civil Appropriation bill was then brought up for consideration, and several amendments were made. In evening session the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill was taken up and the final consideration of it postponed.

In the House of Representatives a bill was passed to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and Her Britannic Majesty for the final settlement of the title concerning the Hudson Bay and Puget's Sound Agricultural Company. The bill to enable the New-York Assay Office to make more prompt returns for deposits of bullion, was passed. The Missouri contested election case being called up, the House passed a resolution confirming Mr. SCOTT in his seat. A resolution, declaring that JOHN KLINE is not entitled to a seat as representative from the Third Congressional District of Pennsylvania; but that LEONARD SCOTT is entitled to retain his seat, was agreed to. In the contested election case from the Fifth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, a resolution was passed declaring that CHARLES H. CORRIGAN is not entitled to the seat, but that Mr. RUSSELL THAYER is entitled to retain the seat now occupied by him. The Senate bill to establish a Navy-yard and depot at or near Cairo, Illinois, was taken up. After some debate the bill was amended by adopting the resolution reported by the Naval Committee, to appoint a commission to report at the next session of Congress as to the most suitable location for a naval depot on the Western waters. The House then adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen referred a resolution declaring the Gansevoort property, now again vested in the City, a site for a market, and directing the Street Commissioner to make it complete for that purpose. A communication from City Inspector BOOLS, again calling attention to the fat-boiling nuisance, and expressing the opinion that the Board of Health have the right of themselves, without the concurrence of their President, (the Mayor,) to convene and transact business, was referred, to obtain a report upon the legal aspect of this question. The recent nomination by the Fire Department of BERNARD KINNEY to be an Assistant Engineer, vice JOHN BAULCH, who is in the Government service at Fortress Monroe, was laid over, the nomination being premature, Mr. BAULCH'S resignation not yet having been accepted by the Common Council. The Mayor sent in a message covering and commending to the attention of the Common Council a circular from the head of the State Bureau of Military Statistics, soliciting a collection of facts of interest concerning the New-York regiments participating in the war. The Aldermen adjourned to next Thursday, and the Councilmen to next Monday, at 2 P. M.

Both Boards of the Common Council met yesterday. Both passed, over the Mayor's vetoes, the resolutions to procure badges for the Police Justices, and to open certain up-town streets; adopted a resolution, with appropriation in blank, and appointed a Joint Committee to celebrate the ensuing Fourth of July; and adopted resolutions of respect to the memory of Col. ORLANDO H. MORRISON, of the Sixty-sixth Regiment, and Lieut.-Col. WM. N. GREEN, Jr., of the One Hundred and Seventy-third Regiment, N. Y. V., killed in battle.

The street sweepers "struck" yesterday for their pay, due from April 23d, when they were paid up for their Winter's labor. At ten o'clock A. M. they assembled in large numbers in the Park, and sent a committee to the Comptroller to state their position and their needs. The Comptroller told the committee he had made arrangements to pay them next week, and if the men did not resume work forthwith, and keep the streets clean at this dangerous season, he would not take any pains to pay them. The report of the committee, it is believed from the cheering of the men, soon after heard, gave satisfaction, and it is believed that they will resume work to-day.

The case of Mr. HENDERSON, Navy Agent, which was to have been heard yesterday before Commissioner BEERS, was postponed to some day next week, not yet fixed, to enable Mr. HENDERSON to attend more conveniently.

The Park Bank yesterday subscribed $100,000 to the new $3,000,000 Bounty Fund Loan, and the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank $10,000. The total subscriptions, up to the close of yesterday, amounted to $258,000. It is presumed that the Volunteer Committee will commence recruiting when $500,000 are subscribed.

Yesterday the Hancock Recruiting Committee received checks of $400 each from thirty persons to procure substitutes in anticipation of the draft.

The Tenth Massachusetts Regiment, numbering 150 men, arrived in the City yesterday, en route for home, their term of three years' service having expired.

The tiny brig Vision, only one ton and a half burden, will sail to-day at one o'clock for Europe, from the Battery. Capt. DONOVAN has completed his outfit, and anticipates a pleasant voyage. His crew will consist of Mr. SPENCER of Providence, R. I., and a dog named Toby.

The Arguelles case was argued in the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Recorder HOFFMAN and Judge RUSSELL, on motions to quash the indictments, and to remove them to the United States Circuit Court for trial. The points are given at length in the law column.

The charge against HENRIETTA SULZER, of making a false return as to her income, under the Revenue Law, was dismissed, the matter having been arranged with the Collector.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat states that we are indebted to Gov. BROWN for our easy and safe communication between Gen. SHERMAN'S army and its base. He says that the railroad belongs to the State—that in whatever way this contest may terminate, the State wants the use of it, and if it is destroyed, the Confederate authorities will never replace it. In several instances, persons along the line of the road have indulged in the refined amusement of placing torpedoes on the track to blow up the trains, and in one instance succeeded; but this is considered but a slight annoyance.

Maj.-Gen. SICKLES arrived at New-Orleans, June 17.

The Stock Market was steady yesterday afternoon. The transactions in Gold and Exchange went on quietly at about the last quotations of Thursday, though the differences between buyers and sellers continue wide. Money active at 7 ₩ cent.

Transactions in Flour and Wheat, yesterday, were restricted, and prices lower. Corn was irregular. Oats were brisker and dearer, Government agents buying freely. Provisions were in good demand. Pork was firmer. Whisky was depressed and cheaper. Cotton heavy and drooping. Wool, Tallow, Tobacco, Sole Leather, Fire Crackers, Teas, Coffee, Sugars and Oils attracted more attention. Freights were quiet.

Which Must Give Way First?

It is certain that this war, which has now been in progress for about three years, has a positive limit, beyond which it cannot go. It imposes sacrifices upon both parties to it which no human power can stand indefinitely. Assuming that both sides are determined to fight it through, the question which will give way first depends solely upon their relative vital resources. We say vital resources, for the time has come when they alone are to be taken into account.

The progress of the war has wonderfully simplified the problem. It has eliminated many elements which once were thought important, and by many, even decisive. Foreign intervention—civil war in the North—servile insurrection in the South—starvation of the South—the wearing out of Southern railroads and rolling stock—the secession of North Carolina, or other States, from the "Confederacy"—the popular acceptance of the Amnesty Proclamation—the bankruptcy of the rebel treasury—the ruin of the rebel currency, no longer appear as any part of the problem. It is seen that they never had any real bearing upon the result; or, if they once had it, that it has all come to naught.

What, then, are the elements now actually involved? On our side there are only two—men and money. On the rebel side only one—men. This struggle, in other words, now turns upon which shall first fail—the men and money of the North, or the men of the South. That is the real gist of the matter. All else is "leather and prunella."

If it be asked why we make money an element on the Northern and not on the Southern side, we have to answer that it is settled that the South can and will get along without money, while the North cannot and will not. It is easy enough to say that there ought to be no difference; but war is decided by the what is, and not by the what ought to be. There is just that difference. The "Confederacy" does live without money. Luxuries it does not need; and it has completely shut off their importation by act of Congress. Those of its necessities which can be found at home it obtains by taxation in kind, and by arbitrary impressment. There is no lack on that score, and never will be. Those of its necessities which must come from abroad it procures by cotton, run through our blockade, which brings in Europe enormous prices. This cotton it can continue to grow to any extent it pleases. Nor is there any earthly probability that they will ever lose the power of running the blockade. English vessels, swifter than any in our navy, will do them the same service hereafter as heretofore. It is true that American skill in engine building is equal to British skill, and in naval construction superior. But this is of no avail. Our Navy Department—either in imbecility or knavishness, it is hard to say which—is hopelessly wedded to persons, and systems, and inventions, that render first-class American skill unavailable. It has nearly a thousand vessels, and spends a hundred and forty millions annually; but British skill will still continue to overthrow all its tubs, and junks, and scows, and Confederate cotton will continue to be exported to the extent required by those necessities of the Confederacy which are not supplied at home. So far, then, as the rebel Government is concerned, there is no need of money. As for the people, they easily enough make shift to do their mutual business by barter and with printed rags. On the other hand, money, or something truly representing it, is a necessity at the North. The Government of the United States cannot, like that of the rebels, rob; it must buy. It cannot, like the other, repudiate; it must pay. Unlike the other, it has a character which it must maintain. Its people, too, are not so near the primitive state as to be able to transact their business by barter, or with wampum and cowries. They must have a currency, with either an intrinsic value, or a sound basis of credit. With scant exports, most of what they get from abroad must be paid for in gold. The amounts they thus get from abroad are very large—in necessities much, in luxuries more. This cannot be prevented: perhaps, as furnishing gold at the Customs for the payment of national interest, and strengthening of national credit, it ought not to be prevented, if it could be. This way of living, in Government and in people, requires money, or a form of credit equivalent to money, and to the extent of hundreds of millions annually.

Again, then, we say, the question is, Which will fail first, the National men and money, or the Confederate men?

First, as to men. On this point there is no possibility of mistake. The census figures cannot lie. The eleven "Confederate" States, including Tennessee and Arkansas, and excluding Missouri, contained, by the last census, five millions and a half of white persons, of which one million and a quarter were white males between fifteen and fifty. We make no account of the portion of the population of those States now within our army lines, no longer available for the supply of the rebel armies. The remaining States, by the same census, contained twenty-one millions of white persons, of whom a little more than five millions were white males between fifteen and fifty. Granting that three-fourths between these ages are physically capable of military duty—which is a very large allowance—there were about nine hundred thousand men of whom soldiers might be made, in the "Confederacy," and thirty-seven hundred thousand in the loyal States. So, in round numbers, the two sides started at the beginning of the war. Have the great losses to both sides, inflicted by the war itself, materially changed the proportion? There is no good reason to believe that these losses have much differed. Perhaps we have lost more life outright, in consequence of acting more generally on the offensive than the rebels have done, but this is more than counterbalanced by the fact that our wounded have far more generally recovered than theirs, without disablement, on account of the superior skill and larger number of our army surgeons, and the splendid work of our Sanitary Commissions, which are unknown to the "Confederacy,"—and the other fact, that we have a very large excess of prisoners. It is estimated that our armies have lost since the war opened half a million, by death and disablement. If the rebels have lost an equal number—which there is no good reason to doubt—they have but FOUR HUNDRED thousand white men left fit for military service, while we have THIRTY-TWO HUNDRED thousand. So stands, to-day, the undeniable fact. We make no account of the circumstance that to the rebels the black race is not available for military purposes, while to us it is so in an eminent degree, we already having one hundred thousand of them under arms, able and willing to do most effective fighting. Let that pass. The relative figures we have given concerning the material for white soldiers, is of itself far more than enough—making every allowance for the fact that large numbers of white men are required at the North to do necessary labor which is done by slaves at the South—to settle the fact that, as the war is now going on, the material for soldiers must be used up very much sooner in the South than in the North. So far as that element in the problem goes, there can possibly be no mistake that it is decisive for the North.

Now, how about the other element? Will money fail the North, sooner than men the South? This is a question which is not so determinable by definite figures as the other. Yet it seems to us that analogy enables it to be answered just as surely. Three years of war, as has just been shown by Mr. CHASE in the table published by us yesterday, have loaded the Government with a debt of seventeen hundred and nineteen millions. It is safe to say that three years more of war will not more than double that debt—making it less than thirty-five hundred millions. It is true that the prices of the material of war have greatly advanced; but this is abundantly offset by the fact that a great number of ships and a vast amount of material, which will not have to be replaced, have been provided from our present indebtedness, and the other fact that no small portion of this debt accumulated before the tax and tariff systems, now in operation, could be established to help meet the current expenses. Could we not stand thirty-five hundred millions of debt without breaking down? The answer to this is that Great Britain, with less than half of our population and available revenues, had a heavier debt than that on her shoulders fifty years ago, and that so far from breaking down under it, she has all the while since been advancing with the strength of a giant. This is the decisive point. If we can endure the debt, regularly paying off its interest when due, the whole financial system of the Government is secure, and a national currency, based on the national credit, can be maintained to the full extent required by the business of the people. The end of the next three years would see us heavily burdened, to be sure, but still uncrushed. But where would they find the armies of the rebellion? If the last three years have put five hundred thousand rebels hors du combat, and there are but four hundred thousand able-bodied men left, it needs no labored calculation to prove that, with the same active prosecution of the war, the last rebel soldier would be in the same condition before the end of the next three. The fighting of the "Confederacy" will be brought to a stand-still simply from the lack of men to do the fighting. And when the "Confederacy" ceases to fight it ceases to exist.

We think we have fairly answered the question we started with. If this be so, it is a weakness to doubt the final issue of this war. If the Northern people continue to sustain the Government as they have done hitherto, the final breaking down of the rebellion is as sure—unless Heaven turns against us—as any physical result can be.

Irish Emigration and Recruiting.

The European mail which arrived last evening puts us in possession of full text of the speeches delivered in the House of Lords during the debate on Irish enlistments. Lord RUSSELL'S remarks we publish at length in other columns. They will be found to be a mixture of half-friendly argument and querulous complaint—the latter naturally directed against the Government of the United States. Lord RUSSELL, in short, appears in one of his most fretful moods; and it will be seen he travels far beyond the record toward the close of his speech, in order to declaim against the war and insinuate a plea for the right of secession.

Leaving out of account, however, the temper of Lord RUSSELL'S speech, it so happens, by one of those singular coincidences which do sometimes arise, that simultaneously with the occurrence of the debate in question, the report of the British Commissioners of Emigration was laid before Parliament. And from that report a more pointed rejoinder to the charge of the employment by our Government of foreign enlistment agencies in Ireland can be drawn, than from all the official papers on isolated cases of alleged grievance put together. In the Commissioners' statement we have complete evidence on a variety of directly pertinent points. The emigration of the past year, great as it has been, falls far short of the average years from 1847 to 1854, (the first year of the Crimean war,) when there was an active demand for recruits for the British army. But far more pointed is another fact which is brought out in the report, viz.: that of the Irish emigration to the United States, the proportion of single men—or of "fighting material"—was no greater in the heavy aggregate of 1863, than in the returns of 1860—when there was no war, and only a distant speck of war in this country. Nor is this all: the report deals with the returns of Irish emigrants for the first three months of the present year, and it is found that, out of the aggregate, the number of single men is smaller than that for the corresponding three months of 1860. It has, moreover, to be taken into account, that boys above twelve years of age are classed as single "men." And even after sweeping the latter class into the category of fighting material, the whole makes up an average of only 25,000.

Then, again, the Commissioners admit that if the distress in Ireland has not proved the same stimulant to emigration as that of the "famine years," the deficiency has been more than made good by the vast amount of remittances from this side of the Atlantic—remittances made by prosperous Irish settlers here, expressly to enable poor and suffering relatives to emigrate. The sum of these remittances for the year was found to reach no less than £412,000, or at the present rate of exchange, over four millions of dollars. And, of course, the Commissioners do not pretend to say that this even covers the whole of the private—and properly speaking—family contributions from this country, which went toward the encouragement of Irish emigration. It is perhaps superfluous to add to these pregnant facts the consideration of the speed, the facility, the economy and the safety with which passages may be made now, compared with the "famine years," when sailing ships were almost the only resort of the emigrant. All goes simply to illustrate the important point, that there is nothing in the amount or in the kind of emigration from Ireland during the past year to justify the suspicion even of any extra agencies for increasing the supply of ordinary labor; much less do the returns suggest the existence of illegal, secret recruiting offices, supplied with extra service money, to entrap the unwary in the United States Army.

To admit, in the face of these official returns, that we have had recruiting sergeants posted at all the great emigrant ports in Ireland, that we have primed them with bounty-money, have thrown over them a quasi-official shield, and have ordered them to find us fighting material at whatever cost, would be not merely to admit a grave breach of international duty, but to confess to a series of acts of unmitigated folly. If we had been keeping up a secret recruiting staff in Ireland at enormous expense and at still greater risk, for the beggarly purpose of taking our chance of fighting material, out of a promiscuous batch of 25,000 men and boys as the result of the whole year's work, while our armies have been kept up at the rate of 800,000 a year—then the sheer madness of the operation would far exceed its criminality; and instead of inviting the censure of the aggrieved Power, we should simply earn and merit universal derision.

One of the chief grievances attached to the general complaint in the House of Lords is, that recruits for the British Army cannot be had in any number at the present time in Ireland. Less than half as many enlisted in 1863, as in 1860. Without seeking to find any political reason for this, it is surely a fair enough supposition that those who take to the army from a natural liking, without regard to the object of the war, will give a preference to the service which offers the highest pay, the best provisioning, the largest bounties, and the least extended term of enlistment. And to these motives Lord RUSSELL may safely ascribe both the gains which our military service has made, and the losses which the British service has sustained, by the course and progress of Irish emigration.

Amusements.

In our advertising columns will be found a card and announcement convoking a meeting of the New-York Managers at Mr. WALLACK'S private residence in Fourteenth-street, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday next. The object being to take some united action in view of the increased demands of the "Musical Protective Union," which, it is alleged, undertakes to dictate to managers whom they shall employ, and what prices they shall pay—reserving to themselves the privilege of leaving any Manager without an orchestra, unless he succumbs to their demands. The New-York Managers dissent. "They offer their old orchestras increased compensation for the ensuing season, on signing an agreement for that period, which, under advisement of the association," they refused to do.

A Good Suggestion.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 24, 1864.

To the Editor of the New-York Times.

May I ask that you suggest to the readers of your paper the propriety of not investing money in senseless crackers, squibs, and small fire works, on the 4th of July, but instead thereof, to apply their funds to the relief and comfort of the bereaved widows and orphans of soldiers. Would not such be more appropriate—to say nothing of the accidents that will be prevented by promiscuous firing in our public streets.

Respectfully,
A SOLDIER.

Lady Gaffney went in harness, the other two to wagons. Mr. WALKER desirred that her ladyship should also go to wagon, but the judges objected to any alteration of the original conditions of the race, the discussion of this point causing the start to be delayed until close on five o'clock. The betting was 10 to 7 on St. Lawrence against the field—both heats won handily.

It was mustered into the service on the 21st of June, 1861, since which time it has been engaged in fourteen battles. It was with McCLELLAN all through the Peninsula campaign, and has lost, as will be seen by its decimated ranks, a large number of its men. Col. HENRY S. The President stated the object of the meeting, after which addresses were made by Rev. H. W. Beecher, Rev. E. M. Hatfield, Rev. A. A. Willets, Rev. E. M. Johnson, and Hon. George Hall. Resolutions organizing the association were adopted. The veterans of the Fourteenth and Sixty-seventh Regiments were present.

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 24.

THE GRADE OF LINE OFFICERS IN THE NAVY.

Mr. HALE, of New-Hampshire, (Union,) introduced a bill to amend the act to establish and equalize the grade of line officers in the navy, which was referred to the Naval Committee.

This bill prescribes that in time of peace, removal by death or otherwise, shall not be considered as creating a vacancy. It limits the active list of line officers to 9 Rear Admirals, 25 Commodores, 50 Captains, 100 Commanders, 150 Lieutenant-Commanders, 150 Ensigns, 150 masters, and such a number of midshipmen as are now allowed, and as many master's mates as the exigencies of the service may require. Five Lieutenant-Commanders, 20 Lieutenants, 50 Masters and 70 Ensigns shall be made from the volunteer service. Promotions to the rank of Rear-Admiral shall be made by the selection of three Commodores by a board of not less than three Rear-Admirals, and from the three chosen, the President of the United States shall designate one.

CIVIL APPROPRIATION.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) from the Committee on Finance, reported back the House bill making an appropriation for certain civil expenses of the Government, with an amendment.

THE PUBLIC WORKS.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Union,) from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill to provide for the repair and preservation of certain public works of the United States, made a report, recommending that the Senate recede from its amendments.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER called up the bill for the promotion of commerce and the improvement of navigation, which was passed.

It authorizes the publishing and sale of maps, charts and nautical books of the coasts of the United States, as well as of foreign seas. The sale to be at the cost of printing, engraving and paper.

THE LOAN BILL.

The Loan Bill was received from the House and referred to the Committee on Finance.

THE PACIFIC TELEGRAPH.

Mr. CHANDLER called up the bill for increased facilities of telegraph communication between the Atlantic and Pacific States, and the Territory of Idaho.

It authorizes the United States Telegraph Company and their associates to erect lines of telegraph between the Missouri River and San Francisco, on such route as they may select, and also a line from Fort Hall, by the way of Walla-Walla and San Francisco, to Portland, Oregon, and from Fort Hall to Bannock and Virgin City, in Idaho, &c.

An amendment proposed by the Committee on Commerce, striking out the provision of $20,000 a year for ten years, to be paid by the United States for its messages, was agreed to.

The bill was then passed.

TRADE WITH REBEL STATES.

Mr. CHANDLER called up the bill in addition to the several acts concerning intercourse between the loyal and disloyal States.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, (Union,) moved amendments thereto, by which, instead of repealing so much of a former act as prohibits all commercial intercourse, the exception is made so far as may be necessary to supply the actual wants of loyal persons residing within the lines, and allow them to sell in market the products of their own labor or of freedmen, &c.

The bill was postponed until to-morrow, in order to have the amendments printed.

THE IRISH ENLISTMENT QUESTION.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Maryland, (Union,) offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to inform the Senate if any authority has been given to any one, either in this country or elsewhere, to obtain recruits in Ireland or Canada for our army or navy, and whether such recruits have been obtained, or whether, to the knowledge of the Government, Irishmen or Canadians have been induced to emigrate to this country in order to recruit, and if so, what measures, if any, have been adopted in order to avoid such conduct.

A CATALOGUE.

On motion of Mr. ANTHONY, of Rhode Island, (Union,) the Committee on the Library was instructed to inquire into the expediency of causing to be compiled a catalogue of all patents issued relative to the rebellion.

SALARIES INSTEAD OF COMMISSIONS FOR POSTMASTERS.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Union,) from the Post Office Committee, reported a bill to provide for fixed salaries in lieu of commissions for Postmasters. [The salaries under the present system the Postmasters [illegible] voluminous accounts in their offices. The passage of this bill would be dispensed with. The bill referred to the Postmaster-General to fix the salaries according to what have been the receipts of the [illegible] offices heretofore.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Union,) introduced a resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay over to HENRY C. DEANUA the sum of $[illegible] deposited with JAY, COOK & Co., to the credit of C. V. HOGAN, an employe of the secret service of the Treasury Department, or to cause the whole or part thereof to be confiscated to the United States, as in the judgment of the Secretary may appear just.

PROGRESS OF CERTAIN GUNBOATS.

Mr. HALE endeavored to introduce a resolution of inquiry relative to the progress of certain gunboats ordered in 1862, and especially the Chimo, launched at Boston.

Mr. CONNESS, of California, (Union,) objected.

CIVIL APPROPRIATIONS.

The bill making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government then came up as the special order.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) rose to offer a resolution.

Objection was made.

Mr. DAVIS then moved to postpone this and all other prior orders, with the view of then offering his resolution.

Questions of order were raised, but Mr. DAVIS contended that his motion was in order.

Mr. CONNESS desired that the resolution be read that Senators might have information.

Mr. DAVIS said his resolution was not in the question, as he had only moved to postpone prior orders.

The Chair decided that the resolution was not before the body.

Mr. CONNESS said the resolution ought to be understood. It was the same as that attempted to be offered by the gentleman the other day for making peace or suspending the war with the rebels.

Mr. TRUMBULL said it could not be in order to postpone a special order, made so by a two-thirds vote, to take up something, by a mere majority vote, not before the body.

Mr. DOOLITTLE said that when a motion was made to suspend a prior order, it was always for the purpose of taking up something else.

Mr. DAVIS further explained. Finally the chair decided that a motion to postpone prior orders must embrace the proposition of taking up something else. The motion was indivisible.

Mr. DAVIS, appealed from the decision of the chair, but on Mr. HALE'S motion the appeal was laid on the table. Yeas, 20; nays, 6. So the resolution of Mr. DAVIS was not received.

The bill making appropriations for certain civil expenses was then proceeded with, the Senate being as in Committee of the Whole. In passing upon various items, the following amendments were made, viz.: Striking out the section appropriating $30,000 for converting the old Hall of Representatives into a hall for statuary from all the States, laying a marble floor, &c., and inserting $3,000, to enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to fence, grade and beautify Franklin-square in this city, and $150 for sewering the Botanical Garden; also, $7,000 for purchasing 18,500 feet of land adjoining the Columbia Institute for the deaf, dumb and blind for that institution, and striking out the appropriation of $25,000 to increase the work on the buildings for the accommodation of the inmates. The appropriation of $31,400 for a building to be used as a mechanic shop for the same institution was also struck; and an appropriation of $50,000 was inserted to build a custom-house in Portland, Maine.

The Senate then took a recess until 7 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

A PEACE BILL.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to establish peace among the people of the United States.

A TERRITORIAL TELEGRAPH.

Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, (Union,) introduced a bill to make a grant of lands in the Territories of Colorado, New-Mexico and Arizona, in aid of a railroad and telegraph line through those Territories. Referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

THE UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) by unanimous consent, submitted a resolution inquiring of the Committee on Foreign Relations if any legislation is needed relative to the treaties with the United States and Colombia. Which was considered and passed.

A CONGRESSIONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. RIDDLE submitted a joint resolution to allow Senators and Representatives to visit the forts, military prisons and hospitals in their respective States. Which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PENSION BILL.

Mr. FOSTER, of Connecticut, (Union,) called up the House bill supplementary to act entitled an act to grant pensions, approved July 14, 1862.

The amendments of the Pension Committee were considered and agreed to.

Some discussion arose on the ninth section relative to the allowance of pensions to persons, not enlisted, who volunteered for the time being to serve in the forces of the United States against the rebels and Indians, and were disabled in such temporary service, the Committee's amendment being to strike out the provision.

Discussion also arising on the amendment providing pensions for the widows and children of colored soldiers, the bill was postponed.

MISCELLANEOUS APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Miscellaneous Appropriation Bill being the special order, was then taken up.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) offered a new section, that the eighth and ninth sections of the act, prohibiting the importation of slaves into any part of the United States after January, 1808, which said sections regulate the coastwise Slave-trade, be hereby repealed.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) said it was not proper to incumber this bill with this proposition, which was not pertinent to it.

Mr. SUMNER replied that his amendment was appropriate as connected with the custom-houses. It was important to have these two sections removed from the statute-book. He referred to past legislative history to show where important reforms had been engrafted on pending bills.

Mr. SHERMAN repeated that no extraneous matters or matter not germain should be attached to appropriation bills, and in this case a controversy might arise which would embarrass the passage of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON said there was nothing in the limitation which prohibits Slavery from being carried from one port to another.

Mr. SUMNER—I think it is utterly unconstitutional. I have no doubt of it.

Mr. JOHNSON—I exclude you.

Mr. SUMNER—I beg pardon.

Mr. JOHNSON—If the carrying of slaves from one port to another was without restraint, I would join the Senator in the proposition for repeal.

Mr. SUMNER said he wished to have nothing to do regulating the slave-trade. He wanted nothing to do with such atrocious transactions.

Mr. HENDRICKS, of Indiana, (Dem.,) opposed the amendment. It was but another effort to break up the regulations which our fathers had established. If the Union was restored it must be on the basis of the Constitution. There was not wisdom nor virtue enough to make a new one. If those now estranged would not come back under the old Constitution, he did not expect they would come back under a new one. When the war broke out the Northern people were undivided. But now they were separated, and the South united. Why? Because the party in power have broken their pledge and deceived the public. This was the change brought about within the last three years, not by the Democrats of the North, who only asked that the Union might stand as the fathers made it. If this had been adhered to, the Union feeling in the South would have been strengthened, while the North would have remained undivided.

Mr. COLLAMER said whether the amendment was appropriate or not, it was here and they must vote for or against it. He did not believe Congress has the same power in relation to regulating commerce between the States, as it has between the States and foreign Governments. He did not believe Congress has power to lay an embargo on any State, but could on the whole country, regulating foreign trade.

The statute which it is proposed to repeal, attempted to regulate the Slave-trade, or commerce in slaves. The Constitution gave no such power. If they could regulate, they could prohibit; and this principle had been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. Slaves were not articles of trade and commerce and merchandise, to be regulated by the terms of the Constitution.

Mr. SUMNER amended his proposition, "that the coastwise slave trade shall be prohibited forever."

Mr. JOHNSON said the amendment just proposed placed the question in a different light. From a mere section to repeal the act of 1807, it went beyond. If there was no authority to allow the coastwise Slave-trade, it must be admitted that there was no authority to prohibit it. If Congress, after 1808, had not prohibited the Slave-trade, it might have been carried on, and what then would it have been? Commerce between foreign nations and the United States. If the law is repealed, slaves may be imported again as merchandise. He controverted the views of Mr. COLLAMER, and opposed the amendment in a constitutional argument. Slavery was recognized as property in Slave States, and being thus recognized, it was a subject of trade, and being a subject of trade, it was a matter with which Congress could interfere by regulation, and it has been regulated.

The further consideration of the bill was postponed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, it was resolved that on and after Monday the Senate meet at 11 o'clock.

The Senate at 9¼ o'clock adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 24.

THE EXECUTION OF A TREATY.

Mr. ORTH, of Indiana, (Union,) from the Com-

Bills on Foreign Affairs, reported a bill, which was passed, to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and Her Britannic Majesty for the final settlement of the title concerning the Hudson's Bay and Puget's Sound Agricultural Company.

THE NEW-YORK ASSAY OFFICE.

Mr. KASSON, of Iowa, (Union,) from the Committee on Weights and Measures and Coinage, reported a bill enabling the Assay Office at New-York to make more prompt returns for deposits in bullion. It extends to the Assay office the Act of 1850, regulating transfers of money, so that transfers may be made from time to time, and the depositors paid as early as practicable.

The bill was passed.

THE MISSOURI ELECTION CASE.

Mr. UPSON, of Michigan, (Union,) called up the contested election case of LINDSAY against SCOTT, from the Third Congressional District of Missouri. The House passed a resolution confirming Mr. SCOTT in his seat.

THE PENNSYLVANIA ELECTION CASE.

Mr. SCOFIELD, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) called up the resolution reported from the Committee on Elections, declaring that JOHN KLINE is not entitled to a seat as Representative from the Third Congressional District of Pennsylvania; but that LEONARD MYERS is entitled to retain his seat. The report, which was read, says that there is no reasonable suspicion of fraud. Messrs. SEVERS and RANDALL, of Pennsylvania, severally expressed their dissent from the positions contained in the report.

The resolution was agreed to.

ANOTHER CASE FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, (Union,) called up the contested election case from the Fifth Congressional District of Pennsylvania. The resolution declaring that CHARLES H. CORNEGAN is not entitled to the seat, but that Mr. RUSSELL THAYER is entitled to retain the seat now occupied by him. The resolution was passed.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD ACT.

The House took up the House bill amendatory of the Pacific Railroad Act, the object being to facilitate the construction of the road by modification of some of the provisions of the original bill. Most of the amendments offered were rejected, and the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and lies on the table for further action.

THE CAIRO NAVY DEPOT.

The House took up the Senate bill to establish a navy-yard and depot at or near Cairo, Illinois.

It authorized the President of the United States to accept from the corporate authorities of Cairo, or from any other persons a site for such a navy-yard and depot.

Mr. WASHBURNE, of Illinois, (Union,) spoke of the importance of selecting the site at the point.

Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, (Union,) said a good deal of lobby influence had been used to get the yard located there.

Mr. WASHBURNE called for the names.

Mr. WILSON did not propose to give any names.

Mr. WASHBURNE said the gentleman made the charge but failed to give the proof.

Mr. WILSON replied that he had only followed the example of the gentleman.

Mr. WASHBURNE said he made no charges he was not prepared to meet.

Mr. WM. J. ALLEN, of Illinois, (Dem.,) spoke of the advantages of Cairo for the purpose designed.

Mr. DAVIS, of New-York, (Union,) and Mr. ASHLEY, of Ohio, referred to the overflows of the river, which unfitted Cairo for a navy-yard.

Mr. SPAULDING, of Ohio, (Union,) said that he hoped the House would either refer this bill to the Committee on Naval Affairs, or amend it by substituting the report of that committee, proposing a commission to proceed to the Western waters, for the purpose of examining proper locations for a navy-yard.

Mr. PIKE, of Maine, (Union,) offered as an amendment the resolution of the Committee on Naval Affairs to appoint a commission, as indicated by Mr. SPAULDING, of Ohio.

After further debate the bill was amended by adopting the resolution reported by the Naval Committee, to appoint a commission to report at the next session of Congress as to the most suitable location for a naval depot on the Western waters. At half-past 4 o'clock the House adjourned.

A Down-Town Merchant,

Having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the agonies and cries of a suffering child, and becoming convinced that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP was just the article needed, procured a supply for the child. On reaching home, and acquainting his wife with what he had done, she refused to have it administered to the child, as she was strongly in favor of Homeopathy. That night the child passed in suffering, and the parents without sleep. Returning home the day following, the father found the baby still worse; and while contemplating another sleepless night, the mother stepped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the father with the child. During her absence he administered a portion of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and said nothing. That night all hands slept well, and the little fellow awoke in the morning bright and happy. The mother was delighted with the sudden and wonderful change, and although at first offended at the deception practiced upon her, has continued to use the Syrup, and suffering, crying babies and restless nights have disappeared. A single trial of the Syrup never yet failed to relieve the baby, and overcome the prejudice of the mother. Thirty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

DIARRHŒA. DIARRHŒA.

The season is at hand when this complaint is common. Half to a full wine-glass of CRIMEAN BITTERS, taken twice or thrice, at intervals of an hour, will check it, leaving the bowels in a quiet and natural state. Hon. J. McDougall, United States Senator of California, says: "They are excellent for digestion, CORRECTING DIARRHŒA, nausea, irritation of the stomach, &c., and in all respects the best bitters I have ever used." Combined by the late Dr. Chilton. For sale by druggists everywhere.

HALLECK'S NAPOLEON.
LIFE OF NAPOLEON.
BY BARON JOMINI,
General-in-Chief and Aid-de-Camp to the Emperor of Russia.
Translated from the French, with notes,
BY H. W. HALLECK, LL. D.,
Major-General United States Army, author of "Elements of Military Art and Science," "International Law and the Laws of War," &c., &c.
IN FOUR VOLUMES, OCTAVO, with an
ATLAS OF SIXTY MAPS.
Price, in red cloth binding, $25.

It is needless to say anything in praise of JOMINI as a writer on the science of war.

Gen. Halleck has laid the professional soldier and the student of military history under equal obligations by the service he has done to the cause of military literature in the preparation of this work. His rare qualifications for the task thus undertaken will be acknowledged by all.

The notes with which the text is illustrated by Gen. Halleck are not among the least of the merits of the publication, which, in this respect, has a value not possessed by the original work.

It is an imaginary autobiography of the Emperor, as conceived and written by JOMINI, in the name of the Emperor. And whether regarded as a military study or as a study in history, it is equally interesting to professional and unprofessional readers.—National Intelligencer.

HISTORY OF WEST POINT, WITH THE ORIGIN AND PROGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY.
By Capt. EDWARD C. BOYNTON, A. M.,
Adjutant of the Military Academy.

One volume, octavo, 450 pages, printed on tinted paper, beautifully illustrated with maps and fine engravings, chiefly from photographs taken on the spot by the author. Bound in blue cloth. Price $5.

"Aside from its value as an historical record, the volume under notice is an entertaining guide-book to the Military Academy and its surroundings. We have full details of cadet life from the day of entrance to that of graduation, together with descriptions of the buildings, grounds, and monuments. To the multitude of those who have enjoyed at West Point the combined attractions, this book will give, in its descriptive and illustrated portion, especial pleasure.—New-York Evening Post.

"The second part of the book gives the history of the Military Academy from its foundation in 1802, a description of the academic buildings, and the appearance today of this always beautiful spot, with the manner of appointment of the cadets, course of study, pay, time of service, and much other information yearly becoming of greater value, for West Point has not yet reached its palmiest days.

The book is beautifully printed on thick tinted paper, with excellent illustrations, and an abundance of those fine clear-cut maps in which your true West-Pointer so much delights."—Boston Daily Advertiser.

"We cannot close without thanking Capt. Boynton for the vast amount of information so well collated in his book, and for his clear statement of the history and condition of the Academy from the beginning to the present time."—North American Review.

ARTEMUS WARD.

The great exponent of NATIVE AMERICAN HUMOR, makes his FIRST SENSATIONAL APPEARANCE since his return from California, in the
SUNDAY MERCURY
OF
TO-MORROW, JUNE 26,
in an irresistibly comic melange, entitled
MATTERS AND THINGS.
It would spoil the UNIVERSAL LAUGH
which the lucubrations of Artemus are calculated to create to explain the point, or rather the hundred points, of this amusing sketch, and it is therefore left to explain itself to the thousands who will devour it at breakfast to-morrow morning. The commencement of
A RARE STORY,
BY MARGARET BLOUNT,
will also be a marked feature in this CRACK NUMBER
LEADING SUNDAY JOURNAL.

This exquisite romance, by the authoress of "Regina, or The Birth Right," "The Orphan of Charnley," &c., &c., is decidedly the most impressible tale she has ever written. The interest deepens with every chapter, and culminates in a sequel which has rarely been exceeded in dramatic effect.

THE DISBANDED VOLUNTEER
volunteers his opinions on the immediate topics of the day, in his usual VEIN OF CUTTING SARCASM,
and the issue, in all its several departments, will be found one of the best specimens of a literary, humorous, dashing, racy, independent and general newspaper that has ever been published on a Sunday in this country. Politics, Poetry, Commerce, Finance, Fun, Local Incidents, Court News, Foreign Intelligence, Table Talk, Show News, Social Sketches, Army Correspondence from soldiers of every grade, Anecdotes, Original Views on all Subjects, Wide-Awake Editorials, in short, everything that constitutes of the most comprehensive character, will be found in its columns.
A LIVE PRESS,

THE SUNDAY MERCURY
is a paper sui generis. Every feature of the metropolitan and country press is embraced in its many departments. It sweeps the entire field of newspaper literature, and is an epitome of the WHOLE AMERICAN PRESS.
With every returning week, some new attraction is added to its varied pages, and everything industry can gather or money purchase that can give zest to a newspaper is purveyed for this
ORGAN OF THE PEOPLE.
Its dispatches from all sections of the extended theatre of war are up to 5 O'CLOCK ON SUNDAY MORNING.
It is uniformly
AHEAD OF ALL RIVALS
IN IMPORTANT WAR NEWS and foreshadowings of military events. Of course, under these circumstances its circulation is continually on the rise, and is now nearly FOUR TIMES GREATER than that of all its Sunday cotemporaries combined. Since newspapers were invented there has never been the same amount and variety of information given in print for the same money.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.
WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 24.

WHERE LEE'S ARMY IS.

The locality of LEE'S army is now better comprehended than it has been for the last ten days, and the knowledge we have of it is decidedly comforting to the nervous people who are in perpetual terror of a descent on Washington. In fact, at the close of last week, when it was found that the troops of BEAUREGARD alone were behind the intrenchments from which the ARMY of the Potomac was repulsed in a general assault, and that LEE'S army was somewhere else intact, there was considerable apprehension, both in the army and elsewhere, that the main rebel army had actually set out on some northern expedition. If BEAUREGARD, behind his successive though temporary lines of earthworks, could hold us at bay for a couple of weeks, and the garrison of Richmond, the rebel iron-clads and Fort Darling could detain us on the south bank of the James for twenty days longer, what was to hinder LEE in this time to strike in the direction of the Potomac with his whole body, and create another panic through the country? But we now know that nearly all of LEE'S army has reached the works fronting Petersburgh, and is there planted for the defence of that important position. The corps of LONGSTREET, that of A. P. HILL and a portion at least of EWELL'S corps are in front of the army of Gen. MEADE. LEE has quite as much work as he can attend to on the James River; and though it was absolutely necessary for him to send a division to check the dangerous advance of HUNTER, the last thing he is likely to attempt is to send a solitary graybback or an army of greybacks beyond the mountains on the Rapidan.

THE GOLD BILL.

A delegation appointed by the New-York Chamber of Commerce to visit and urge upon Congress the repeal or modification of the Gold Bill, will have an interview with the Senate and House Finance Committees to-morrow morning. The Committee represent that passage of the Gold Bill has completely unsettled affairs in New-York, and if not repealed or modified, it will seriously embarrass business interests there.

THE TAX BILL COMPLETED.

The Tax Bill was completed to-day, and will be reported at once. The tax on whisky is $1 50 after the 1st of July, and $2 after the 1st of February next. The tax on a majority of the articles have been put up at the highest point. The tax on incomes, however, has not been increased. The amount of revenue which it is expected to produce will be nearly $300,000,000.

GEN. BUTLER'S ARMY.

The recent movements and changes in the location of army corps show conclusively that the army of Gen. BUTLER is practically and for all purposes merged with the Army of the Potomac, and that all the movements of the entire body are controlled by Lieut.-Gen. GRANT. Thus, the Eighteenth Army Corps, which operated so successfully near Petersburgh on Wednesday of last week, immediately after returning from its temporary junction with Gen. GRANT on the Chickahominy, and which, after its successful operation returned to BUTLER and Bermuda Hundred, was again at the opening of this week, marched back to GRANT'S main force, and on Tuesday stood, with the other four corps, fronting Petersburgh. The fact that there is a perfect unity of operation in all the movements of the entire force acting against LEE and BEAUREGARD, will be very gratifying and assuring to the country. It is quite probable that BEAUREGARD, in a like manner, has been subordinated in his movements to the orders of LEE.

Music at the Central Park—A Suggestion for it on the Lake.

National Pot Pourri.

A correspondent suggests that the commissioners alternate between the lake and the Mall with the music. Last year the band was occasionally on the lake, and the effect of the music was much more charming, besides being audible to those riding, driving and walking at quite a distance from it. From the music-stand the sound reaches effectively but a comparatively short distance. When the music is on the lake, the people gather on all the borders, or roam about within reach of its pleasant influences, not crowded, not sweltering, and with much more enjoyment to themselves and appreciation of it. The suggestion is worth the thought of the commissioners, who have ever been ready to afford "the greatest good to the greatest number."

Letter from the Navy Agent.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: I have to ask that the public will form no opinion unfavorable, in regard to myself and my conduct of the Navy Agency at this port, until, in the first place, I can find out what offences I am accused of by the Government, and until, in the second place, the charges which may be made against me, as well as the charge made already by Mr. SAVAGE, himself a prisoner in Fort Lafayette, and charged with the commission of heinous crimes, can be submitted to judicial investigation.

In the meantime, I deny most positively that I have in any way or manner wronged the Government or any private person; I assert in the most positive manner that I have discharged my duties as Navy Agent with the strictest honor, and with the utmost care and fidelity. And I entreat all men in this community to believe this until the contrary is proved. I have, I think, a right to ask this, as one who has spent years in this community as a business man, and who has in all those years maintained a character without stain or reproach. I. HENDERSON.

A PLEASANT EXCURSION.—The second of Mrs. CROSBIE'S family excursions will take place at Pleasant Valley Grove to-day. The ground is well selected, and the arrangements are said to be quite extensive. The time and place of starting is advertised in another column.

Dr. Von Eisenberg
DEAFNESS AND CATARRH.

No. 26 FORSYTH-ST., NEW-YORK, Oct. 1, 1863.

Dr. Von Eisenberg:

DEAR SIR: Without recapitulating the numerous benefits I have received through your wonderful cure of the deafness I have labored under many years, the blessings I enjoy will convince the most skeptical.

I have tried many aurists, in Europe and America, without success. I was still deaf as a post.

Three years ago I entered your office, underwent one operation, hoping, yet doubting, I should receive any relief, but was agreeably disappointed in finding the genius of your profession.

The innate skill you possess cured my deafness in one almost painless operation.

The joy I experienced was indescribable; 'twas a new life to me.

My hearing is perfect to this day.

I strongly advise all who are suffering unders difficulty of hearing, or total deafness, to consult you immediately, as I also personally recommend all who apply to me. The numerous calls trespass on my time and patience, yet, remembering my own long, weary affliction causes me to pity them.

This is not written to advertise your well-known, unrivaled reputation—that would be peurile; but as a measure of precaution, to induce all to call on you at once, without troubling me; yet I do not refuse to see any one who comes to me. This is the only way I can show my gratitude.

I also call the attention of those who are suffering from Catarrh, which disease I have labored under one year or more.

I experienced difficulty in breathing, langour, heaviness over the eyes, a sense of tightness on the brain, and copious expectorations of a hard and viscid nature. Accompanying this is a "polypus," quite filling the right nostril. On the 25th ult. you operated on both, killing the polypus, which is gradually passing away, and giving me great relief from the Catarrh. One more operation will effectually cure.

This testimonial brings with it my unalloyed and grateful thanks, with but a poor delineation of your wondrous skill as an Aurist.

I am, Sir, yours very gratefully,
EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.

For the cure of all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, such as ERUPTIONS ON THE FACE,

HUMORS,
SCROFULAS,
SALT RHEUM, &c., &c.

IT WILL DO GREAT GOOD TO ALL BY LAYING THE FOUNDATION OF HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

All heavy and drowsy sensations, which are the forerunners of disease, are effectually warded off by this medicine; it also conduces to sound and refreshing sleep; a high flow of spirits; great vigor and lightness of body, as well as a keen appetite to enjoy the most homely fare. Sight and hearing, so indispensable to our enjoyment and happiness, are greatly strengthened by the depuration of their respective organs. It also acts equally well in the following cases:

BILIOUS COMPLAINTS,
BLOTCHES OF THE SKIN,
DEBILITY,
FEMALE IRREGULARITIES,
HEADACHES,
JAUNDICE,
LIVER COMPLAINTS,
PILES,
SALT RHEUM,
SCROFULA,
SECONDARY SYMPTOMS,
TUMORS,
ULCERS,
WEAKNESS FROM WHATEVER CAUSE.

It is one of the very best SPRING AND SUMMER MEDICINES ever known; it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the body, but it creates NEW, PURE AND RICH BLOOD—a power possessed by no other medicine in so great a degree, and in this, lies the grand secret of its wonderful success.

When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from the effects of Spring weather, change of climate, want of exercise, or the use of a uniform saline diet, or from any other cause, will RENEW the BLOOD, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body. No one should attempt a sea voyage without a full supply of this article, and in fact none who are in health should be without it in any case.

STERLING'S

No female in delicate health—old, young or middle-aged—should neglect to take it.

PRESERVE HEALTH BY WARDING OFF DISEASE!

Keep your blood pure and healthy—all which is done by the use of

STERLING'S BLOOD PURIFIER.

It is never injurious, and always beneficial, especially to Nervous, Debilitated and
